Hiranuma, Favoring Army, Considered Likely Successor; China War Issue

By the Associated Press.

Tokyo (Wednesday), Jan. 4.—Finally surrendering to the pressure of extreme Nationalist elements, the government of Premier Prince Konoye fell today after 19 months in office.

It was considered almost certain in informed circles that Baron Kiichiro Hiranuma, president of the Privy Council and leader of the former Nationalist Party, Kokuhonsha, would be summoned to the Emperor's palace tonight or Thursday and ordered to form a new cabinet.

[After presenting his resignation to the throne, The Post special correspondent said, Premier Konoye issued a statement to the nation in which he declared there was need of building up a "new political shape" and reviving the popular mind, and he felt unable to assume this responsibility.

["The China incident is entering upon a new phase and the time has come to construct a new order in East Asia," Premier Konoye declared. "In order to meet this new situation, there is need to build up a new political shape and to form a new cabinet to revive the popular mind."

War Minister to Stay

[Premier Konoye's statement seemed to indicate his unwillingness to give Japan a "new political shape," which must mean leading the nation into a Fascist experiment. —Editor's note.]

It was understood Hiranuma would include about half of the present cabinet in his government if asked to assume power.

Minister of Finance Seihin Ikeda, Minister of Marine Mitsumasa Yonai and Home Minister Nobusmasa Suyetsugu were believed certainly slated to be retired, while Public Welfare Minister Marquis Koichi Kido, Minister of War Seishiro Itagaki and Minister of Justice Suehiko Shiono were believed fairly sure to remain.

The tenure of Education Minister Baron Sadao Araki was doubtful.

Chinese Issue Involved

Hiranuma's Kokuhonsha Party (the name means "Nationalist Japan") although now defunct, was considered one of the most radical nationalist groups. Its program declared for support of the army and "Nipponism, which included all the advantages of nationalism, fascism and communism."

It declared for support of the Emperor and said "our party does not represent capitalists; on the contrary we are endeavoring to help the poorest by provoking a revolution against those with money power."

One of the rifts in the cabinet forcing Konoye's resignation was over full application of the national mobilization law which gave the government power to draft the country's man-power and economic resources for an emergency. Konoye, representing the "liberal" element in the dispute, opposed full use of the powers. The law had been enacted by parliament upon his promise it would not be used in the conflict in China. Large business interests had opposed passage of the law.

Another reported cause of cabinet dissension was conflict over control of the China Affairs Board, designed to administer conquered areas of China, which has been credited with bringing about the resignation of Ugaki as foreign minister.

Resignation of the Konoye cabinet came at a time when many ob-

'Political Pull' Blamed in D. C. Relief Frauds

Lewis Also Censures Belief WPA Jobs Are Not Considered Dole

Burdette G. Lewis, District relief investigator, last night blamed "political pull" for many of the cases in which local families with comfortable incomes from other sources were shown to be receiving relief or assistance grants.

Commenting on disclosure in his report that many families with incomes exceeding $300 per month were relief beneficiaries, Lewis said:

"A situation of this kind can be blamed on political pull and the activities of organizations. The latter are frequently unaware that they are being used by clever individuals.

WPA Teachings Blamed

"Another important factor is the feeling that relief, particularly work relief, is not relief at all, but a job such as any other job, or just another way to get money. The WPA has fostered this idea. The effort to uphold the morale of relief clients has had this sort of reaction.

"The investigation has shown that families with comfortable incomes can, by their superior ability to wield influence, obtain public money more readily than those at the starvation level."

In the first installment of his report, made public Sunday, Lewis declared that numerous cases of fraud and "chiseling" existed among District relief clients. He said last night the number of fraud cases probably would run into the hundreds.

Couple Employed Butler

"The really serious cases, a number of which have been found," he said, "should be prosecuted to the limit. As for the doubtful cases, they should simply be dropped from the relief rolls."

In one of the cases uncovered, it was reported, a woman employed in a Government department denied any knowledge of the whereabouts of her husband. The husband, who was on relief part of the time and at other times was employed at various jobs, denied knowing where his wife was. In-

Parran Hails Cancer Drive As Phenomenal

Training, Research and Facilities Enlarged Under Institute Act

Progress under the National Cancer Institute Act has been "phenomenal," Dr. Thomas Parran, Surgeon General of the United States Public Health Service, yesterday informed the advisory council which shares with him the policy-making duties of the institute.

Reviewing the institute's activities since its creation by Congress 17 months ago, Dr. Parran reported:

Twenty-two young physicians are receiving special training in diagnosis and treatment at approved cancer clinic centers under Government stipends.

A cancer unit is being erected at the United States Marine Hospital in Baltimore to provide additional facilities for an estimated 4,000 cases in the next 25 years.

Fifteen research fellowships have been granted for work on projects undertaken by the National Cancer Institute and private research centers.

Five field investigations are under way on the incidence of cancer, mortality, epidemiology of the disease with special reference to the deadly lung cancer, effectiveness of various methods of therapy, and the cost of adequate therapy.

Nine and one-half grams of radium have been purchased and delivered to the Bureau of Standards for rigid tests before the supply is distributed to hospitals and clinics throughout the country. Only one gram will be retained for the institute's own work.

Eighty-two applications for grants-in-aid, aggregating over $1,000,000, have been considered by the National Advisory Cancer Council, of which 16 have been approved, totaling $116,000.

Numerous applications were considered at yesterday's session, but only one was approved. This was a grant of $11,900 to Cornell University Medical School to pursue

Nazis Locate Mystery Radio, Try 21 for Urging Hitler's Fall

By Ralph W. Barnes

Berlin, Jan. 3.—The broadcast over a period of several months of sensational anti-Nazi propaganda programs from a mobile radio station within Germany, is one of the charges against Ernst Niekisch, author and political leader, and co-defendants, whose trial for high treason began today.

The sessions are being held behind closed doors.

There are 21 defendants. Niekisch and two associates in an alleged conspiracy against Reichsfuehrer Hitler and his regime, appeared before the court today.

Death by the Nazis' improved model of the guillotine is the maximum penalty faced by all 21. The court is expected to impose this sentence in the case of most of the defendants. Besides Niekisch, the defendants who went on trial today were Dr. Wilhelm Drexler, a student of government, and Karl Troegler.

The defendants are accused also of organizing anti-Nazi groups within the Reich, and of preparing and distributing anti-Nazi literature.

These charges are believed to screen an alleged plot by Niekisch and associates to assassinate Hitler

Navy Board Asks 25 Ship And Air Bases

Would Rearm Guam, Amid Japanese Isles; Roosevelt Defense Message Next Week

By the Associated Press.

Secretary of the Navy Swanson sent recommendations to Congress yesterday for a huge construction program designed to give the expanding Navy more bases and other facilities ashore.

A report compiled by a special Navy board, headed by Rear Admiral Arthur J. Hepburn, advocated many new air, destroyer, submarine and mine bases in the mid-Pacific, Alaska and Atlantic areas.

The report listed 25 completely new projects and expansion of facilities at about 15 existing naval stations. Some of the expansions, officials said, would give the Navy virtually new establishments.

As the report was issued the Nation's fighting ships were moving to sea from many ports for the yearly war games to test their fitness.

President Prepares Message

It came also as President Roosevelt announced that early next week he would send a special message to Congress on the national defense needs.

The island of Guam, which the report recommended should be strengthened to protect both the Philippines and the American Asiatic fleet, has been virtually demilitarized since the signing of the 1922 Washington Naval Treaty.

Almost surrounded by smaller islands which Japan seized from Germany in the World War, it is only some 2,000 miles from Tokyo.

The Washington treaty forbade further fortification of Guam along with the Philippines and certain Japanese and British Pacific outposts. Though the pact expired three years ago, the United States has made no move to strengthen the island.

Publication Assailed

Guam is a way station of Pan-American Airways' transpacific airline. Its population of about 20,000 is administered by the Navy.

Publication of the report produced a furor at the Navy Department because some officers felt it contained such vital defense plans it should have been kept secret. So great was the anxiety that the report temporarily was withdrawn from reporters. It subsequently was released, however.

The most important projects, the board said, were naval air bases at Kaneohe Bay, Midway Island, Wake Island, Guam, Johnston and Palmyra islands in the mid-Pacific; Kodiak and Sitka Islands in Alaska and one at San Juan, Puerto Rico.

"An immediate expansion of training facilities at Pensacola (Fla.), is mandatory," the report continued. The Navy's principal air school is located there.

Other fleet air bases listed for early completion included one at Hampton Roads, Va., for the Chesapeake Bay area; a Southeastern base at Jacksonville, Fla., and others at

Felix Frankfurter Again to Fore in Court Speculation

Prof. Felix Frankfurter of the Harvard Law School, was to the fore again yesterday in speculation on the choice of President Roosevelt for appointment to the Supreme Court.

Reports spread on Capitol Hill that Frankfurter still was the likely selection, after talk had switched in the last two weeks from him to Harold M. Stephens, of Utah, now on the Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia.

Asked at his press conference regarding the report, the President said emphatically he had made no decision on any appointments that have not already been announced.

No Blame on Hopkins, But Williams and Morgenthau Are Hit; Barkley Cleared

Unjustifiable political activity by the Works Progress Administration "in several States and in many forms" yesterday was charged in a report to the Senate by the Senate Campaign Expenditures Committee.

No direct blame was fixed on former WPA Administrator Harry Hopkins, but discrepancies were pointed out between findings of Hopkins' own investigation of WPA in Kentucky and the committee's conclusions.

Former Deputy Works Progress Administrator Aubrey Williams was singled out for special criticism. Williams was accused of "undue political activity" and using "a form of coercion contrary to public policy and the spirit of our Government" in an address to organized WPA workers on June 27.

Legislation Outlined

The report was submitted to the Senate by Chairman Sheppard, together with 15 recommendations for legislation to prohibit Federal relief officials from using their authority to influence political action and to draw tighter legal restrictions against political use of Federal funds.

Sheppard submitted his report before the new Senate had been in session 20 minutes. A move to refer it to the Senate Commerce Committee for study in connection with Hopkins' nomination for Secretary of Commerce is expected in the next few days by either Senate Minority Leader McNary or Senator Bailey (Democrat), of South Carolina, next Commerce Committee chairman.

Barkley Is Cleared

The Hopkins nomination, when it reaches the Senate, is slated to be referred to the same committee. McNary said yesterday he will ask that the Sheppard report be sent to the Commerce Committee if no one else does, and may also ask its consideration by the Appropriations Committee for its bearing on the WPA deficiency bill.

The Sheppard report particularly condemned WPA political activity in three States—Pennsylvania, Kentucky and Tennessee—but in each case exonerated senatorial candidates, including Senate Majority Leader Barkley, of any measure of blame.

The story of the Senate committee's summer and fall study of politics in relief and alleged campaign activity by Federal officials was told in a 65-page report and a 379-page supplemental summary of cases by States.

"While many of these charges after investigation were not sustained, the committee nevertheless finds that there has been in several States, and in many forms, unjustifiable political activity in connection with the work of the Works

Woodrings, Home Sold, Must Move On Day of Party

Secretary of War and Mrs. Woodring have had the house in which they hoped to do their official winter entertaining "sold right out from under them."

The house, until a recent and very-much-of-a-secret transaction, belonged to the Herbert Hoovers. It is the big old residence at 2300 S street, where the Woodrings have lived for a year and a half.

Notice that a new owner would be coming in on February 1 arrived on the desk of Mrs. Woodring the same day the White House notified her February 1 would be the date of her second official day "at home" for this season.

It is definite now, Mrs. Woodring said last night, that on February 1 "we will be at the Shoreham." But the "at home" date probably will be changed.

HIGH COMMERCE Department officials held private parties aboard a Government ship, Acting Comptroller General Elliott said in another report.

Elliott Says U. S. Paid for Roper's Cruises

Lists Flowers, Cigars And Bottled Water for Commerce Dept. Chiefs

Acting Comptroller General Richard N. Elliott yesterday accused former Commerce Secretary Daniel C. Roper and other high Government officials of holding private parties aboard a Government boat and sending the bill to Uncle Sam.

The charge was made in Elliott's annual report to Congress. Roper resigned his Cabinet post two weeks ago.

While the Government was getting bills for such items as paint, provisions or supplies the items in some instances included "Poland water, flowers, cigars, cigarets, etc., purchased for members of parties," Elliott said.

Elliott said the parties were held aboard the Eala, a ship in the service of the Bureau of Navigation and Steamboat Inspection. In his report, he included the vessel's log for the fiscal year of 1935.

Partial entries for 1934 follow:

"July 21, Annapolis, received orders to proceed to Washington. Party boarded vessel 11:45 a. m. en route to Colonial Beach. Party consisted of Assistant Dickinson and guests. (John Dickinson was Assistant Secretary of Commerce at the time.)

House Acts To Balk War Pension Raids

Claims of Veterans Shifted to Group on World War Legislation

An Administration move apparently designed to block proposals for additional World War pensions running into hundreds of millions of dollars enlivened the opening session of the new House of Representatives yesterday.

Revision of House rules to place pensions for World War veterans and dependents in the hands of the World War Veterans' Legislation Committee was seen as an effort to forestall the more liberally minded Pensions Committee from reporting out "extravagant" bills.

Three Chairmen for Revision

The Pensions Committee, which will be headed this session by Representative Smith, of Washington, produced a bill last year that would have given $95,000,000 a year in pensions to widows and children of World War veterans.

On the other hand, the Committee on World War Veterans' Legislation, of which Mississippi Representative Rankin is chairman, reported out a vastly more conservative bill which was passed and signed by the President.

In presenting the proposed change of rules, Representative Sabath of Illinois, chairman-designate of the Rules Committee and dean of the House, asserted all three chairmen of the committees involved were in favor of the revision.

Bankhead 250, Martin 168

Except for a certain amount of Sabath baiting, from the Republican side, the two-and-a-half hour session was conducted in an atmosphere of harmony.

Elected Speaker by a strictly partisan vote of 250 to 168, William B. Bankhead, of Alabama, was escorted to the chair by Representative Martin, of Massachusetts, Republican

Chastened Air of Democrats Marks Opening of Congress

By Edward T. Folliard

The setting was the same as in other years, the ceremonies the same, but there was a distinct difference in tone as the Seventy-sixth Congress convened yesterday.

For one thing, the haughty, almost contemptuous attitude Democrats had displayed toward pathetic Republican minorities after the landslides of 1932-34-36 was missing, blasted away by the revolt at the polls last November.

In the House, where sat 169 Republicans, 80 of whom were not there in the last Congress, the 261 remaining Democrats, it was clear, had recovered their old-time respect for the foe.

Galleries in both Senate and House chambers were jammed as the first gavels fell and the chaplains began their prayers.

The Senate session lasted only 30 minutes, but from the standpoint of spectators it was a better show than that in the House, which lasted 2 hours and 35 minutes.

The new Senators and those re-elected were escorted to Vice President Garner's dais to take the oath. In the House the oath was adminis-

Jollity Belies Strife Ahead; President Speaks at 1 P. M.; McNary Re-elected

By Robert C. Albright.

Awaiting a "go ahead" signal today from the President, a Congress studded with new Republican faces swung wide Capitol doors for business yesterday with house warming ceremonies that belied the stormy sessions ahead.

The convention atmosphere of a Congress convening—renewal of old friendships and the start of new ones—will be followed today by the first serious work of a session rife with subsurface friction.

Promptly at 1 p. m. the President will address both Houses in joint session on the one subject on which both parties may unite—America's international policy and measures necessary for the Nation's defense in a world torn by conflicting doctrines and threat of war.

Defense Message Next Week

The President told reporters he will follow today's address on the state of the Nation with a special message next week on defense.

Today's message, devoted largely to a clarification of America's international position and touching briefly on the Administration's new legislative course, will set in motion legislative machinery that will be grinding rapidly by the end of the week.

The informed consensus was that the President will make plain his strong stand against spread of totalitarian philosophies in this hemisphere.

The President already has announced he will request additional money from Congress to combat activities of foreign agents here through co-ordination of the Government's various intelligence agencies.

Duce May Be Warned

Dispatches from Rome reported United States Ambassador William Phillips in lengthy conference yesterday with Premier Mussolini on what was presumed to be a personal message from President Roosevelt.

While State Department quarters here declined comment, Washington observers speculated on whether Mussolini is being advised in advance of the President's expected criticism of dictatorship governments in his message to Congress today.

Phillips returned to Rome just before the holidays after extensive discussions with the President at Warm Springs.

Questioned on the joint mission to the White House yesterday of Undersecretary of State Sumner Welles and Assistant Attorney General Brien McMahon, the President at his press conference withheld comment.

Senate Sits 30 Minutes

The President's address will be broadcast by National, Columbia and Mutual broadcasting companies over networks reaching every section of the country and abroad. The National Broadcasting Co. said the speech will be broadcast in six languages, requiring seven separate broadcasts for overseas coverage. Columbia's station, WJSV, announced it will rebroadcast the address by electrical transcription at 10 o'clock tonight for the benefit of persons unable to hear the original broadcast.

Meantime, through the jollity of yesterday's opening festivities, broke a hint of explosive battles ahead in a report on WPA activities in politics, in a warning of farm act revision, in reports of withdrawal of a Presidential Labor Board nomi-

Dies Asks Quiz Of Labor Board On Red Views

Hints Members Back Communist; Perkins Ouster Again Demanded

By the Associated Press.

A thorough investigation of the Labor Relations Board to determine whether members approve "the Communist views" of an NLRB economist was asked yesterday by the Dies committee.

The recommendation was contained in a lengthy report to the House based on a five-month investigation of un-American activities.

The committee also criticized the Labor Department, accused some Government departments of refusing to co-operate with the investigation and asked the House to appropriate $150,000 to continue the inquiry.

Meanwhile, Representative Thomas (Republican), New Jersey, reiterated his intention to introduce a resolution calling for impeachment of Secretary of Labor Perkins.

Thomas, a member of the committee, said the resolution would be based on what he called the Secretary's "misconduct" in office, particularly with reference to the Labor Department's failure to deport Harry Bridges, West Coast C. I. O. Maritime leader.

The NLRB should be investigated, the committee said, because David Saposs, chief economist, wrote a magazine article seven years ago which the committee said contained "Communist views."

Madden Defended Saposs

After a witness placed the story in the committee's record several months ago, Saposs explained that it was an "objective report" on minority views at a meeting of labor and Socialist leaders in Vienna, rather than his personal expression. Board Chairman J. Warren Madden defended Saposs' explanation.

All Seven Members Sign

Without naming him, the committee criticized Attorney General Frank Murphy, former Michigan Governor, in connection with the so-called Lansing holiday when a throng assembled at the State capitol, closed stores and marched on the State college. The report said:

"It is believed that a courageous stand on the part of all public officials involved would have prevented these disgraceful occurences and would have avoided the loss of millions of dollars to both labor and capital, which resulted from the stoppage of work and the inability of thousands of employes to work."

The committee contended that Communists were conducting an active movement to undermine the principles of democracy in the United States by "boring from within" in politics, labor unions, schools, churches and the Government.

It also found that Nazi-Fascist groups, like the Communists, "aim ultimately at the destruction of our free institutions."

The committee report, signed by all seven members, accused the Labor Department of failing to carry out deportation laws and said this was a "contributing factor to the widespread activities and propaganda" by subversive elements in the United States.

It referred specifically to a deportation case pending against Bridges, which the department suspended until the Supreme Court rules on a similar case.

The committee suggested registration of alien groups and called for a campaign, especially by public officials, against foreign "isms."

Representative Dies (Democrat), Texas, committee chairman, filed the report and simultaneously introduced measures authorizing the House to re-create the committee with an appropriation of $150,000 for another two years. The group's authority and a $25,000 appropriation expired yesterday.

Some of the committee's findings are:

1. Communism is active in political parties, labor unions and schools and has penetrated the Government to such an extent that some Communists hold key positions in Federal agencies and projects.

2. Nazi-Fascist groups aim at destruction of the Nation's free institutions.

3. While Congress cannot deny citizens the right to advocate Communism, Fascism or Nazism, it can "focus the spotlight of publicity" on subversive activities.

4. A thorough investigation of the West Coast would demonstrate that the Communists have "enjoyed greater success" there than anywhere else in the Nation.

WPA Employes Accused

5. Communists have penetrated the Farmer-Labor Party.

6. A rather large number of employes on the WPA theater project are "either members of the Communist Party or are sympathetic with the Communist Party."

7. The Labor Department should proceed with suspended deportation proceedings against Harry Bridges CIO West Coast maritime leader.

8. Nazi activities can be linked with government-controlled agencies in Germany. About 25,000 persons are active members of German-American bunds and 100,000 are "willing to be seen" at public bund manifestations.

German Consulate Involved

9. Nazi investigation was handicapped by destruction of records but other correspondence definitely indicates that "German consulates in the United States have been the clearing houses for much of the Nazi activity here."

10. Fritz Kuhn, bund leader, told a committee agent that he had power of ambassador and a special "secret arrangement directly with Adolf Hitler."

11. One aspect of Fascist activity is the fact that many Italian-Americans engaged in subversive activities actually are on relief rolls or employed by the WPA and other Government agencies.

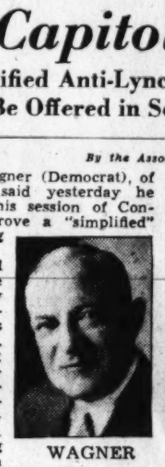
Senator Wagner (Democrat), of New York, said yesterday he would ask this session of Congress to approve a "simplified" antilynching bill.



WAGNER

Wagner said it would be sponsored by himself, Senator Van Nuys (Democrat), of Indiana; Senator Capper (Republican), of Kansas and possibly others. Antilynching legislation brought on a Senate filibuster by Southerners last year and bogged down.

The new proposal, Wagner said, was intended to meet some objections against the old one, but would not be materially different.

The Federal Monopoly Committee has decided tentatively to resume hearings January 16. Justice Department officials will testify regarding possible changes of the antitrust laws.

Chairman La Follette (Progressive) said he felt bound by a promise he made to the last Congress to end activities of the Senate Civil Liberties Committee with a report January 15.

La Follette told newsmen information had been obtained of employers' associations in California which needed further development, but indicated the matter would be abandoned if the Senate does not indicate a clear willingness to give the committee more funds. Appropriations totaling $150,000 have been made for the committee.

Nearly 200 gavels have been presented to Vice President Garner, so he expressed confidence today that he could maintain order and dignity in the Senate.

Opening of a new session always is a test of agility, he continued, because there are usually a dozen gavels that some Senator or friend wants used.

"I use all of 'em," the Vice President said. "Sometimes I have to fumble around with both hands, but I get 'em all in, one way or another."

The special Senate committee to investigate the advisability of taxing Federal and State salaries and securities will begin hearings about January 16, it was announced by Chairman Brown (Democrat), Michigan, author of the resolution which created the committee last session. He proposed a determination of whether the Treasury should collect income taxes on salaries paid by States and on earnings from State securities, and whether States should be allowed to take reciprocal action on Federal salaries and security earnings.

ICC Defends Status, Denies It Is Irresponsible

Says It Must Account To President, Congress And the Courts

By the Associated Press.

The Interstate Commerce Commission directed to Congress yesterday a vigorous defense of its status as an independent agency in the governmental structure.

In its fifty-second annual report, the commission noted that "to some students of government, the so-called 'independent establishment' has been a source of vexation between the traditional triune functions of government, and because it has the appearance of an 'irresponsible' body not definitely answerable to any superior authority."

Denies It Is "Irresponsible"

[In a message to Congress last spring, President Roosevelt said "it would seem to be the part of commonsense" to place all executive functions relating to all transportation in one Federal department, and all quasi-judicial and quasi-legislative matters under a reorganized Interstate Commerce Commission.]

Calling the "independent establishment" a natural development, the commission contended it is responsible to three authorities—the President, Congress and the Federal courts.

"Domination or influence of the regulatory body by either the executive or legislative branch of the Government is certain to bring it within the political sphere with results unfortunate if not disastrous," the report said.

Opposed Extreme Points of View

It expressed opposition to the "two extreme points of view" regarding railroad consolidations and co-ordinations—forced consolidation of the roads into one or several systems, on the one hand, and leaving initiative wholly with the railroads, on the other. . . .

Attributing the acute railroad problem primarily to an "extraordinary increase in transportation competition," the commission said the situation was one that could not be "solved" like a problem in geometry or a cross-word puzzle.

"Basically, the financial condition of the railroads can be improved, apart from a Government subsidy, only by an increase in revenues or a decrease in expenses, or both," the report said.

The report voiced a sharp warning against politics in utility regulation.

British Voters Would Favor Russia Against Germany in War, Survey Shows

By Dr. George Gallup,
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion.

New York, Jan. 3.—A survey of British public sentiment just completed by the British Institute of Public Opinion sheds important light on a question which has been puzzling American observers ever since the famous "peace" of Munich last September.

GALLUP

The question is whether, in the wake of the Munich agreement, the sympathies of the British public lie with Germany, toward whom the Chamberlain government has made advances, or with Russia, who was cold-shouldered out of the Munich parley.

Although official relations between the British and the Soviets have never been marked by great cordiality, the survey shows that more than eight out of every ten British voters say they would sympathize with Russia rather than Germany in case of war between those two countries.

This sentiment exists despite Prime Minister Chamberlain's policy of making a "deal" with Germany. It raises a question whether Germany could expect much aid from Great Britain in case Hitler's ambitions in the Ukraine lead him to war with Russia.

The attitude of British voters parallels almost exactly the attitude of the American public, for a recent American Institute study found that more than eight in every ten American voters also would side with Russia against Germany.

The same question was put to voters in Great Britain and in the United States by the British and American Institutes of Public Opinion. It read:

"If there were a war between Germany and Russia which side would you rather see win?"

| VOTE IN ENGLAND | Pct. |
| Favoring Russia | 85 |
| Favoring Germany | 15 |
| VOTE IN U. S. | |
| Favoring Russia | 83 |

British Public Would Welcome Windsors

By Institute of Public Opinion

New York, Jan. 3.—With signs multiplying that the Chamberlain government may invite the Duke and Duchess of Windsor to return to England to live, a survey in Great Britain reveals that an overwhelming majority of British voters would welcome their former King and his American duchess home.

When voters were asked by the British Institute of Public Opinion "Woud you like the Duke and Duchess of Windsor to make their home in England?" the replies were "yes" 79 per cent, "no" 21 per cent. Approximately one-fifth did not express an opinion.

The popularity of the duke and duchess appears to be increasing. When the same survey question was put to British voters a year ago approximately 60 per cent wanted the Windsors to return, against 79 per cent today.

Approximately one-third of the American voters and of the British voters would not express an opinion.

The American study found that the chief reasons for siding with Russia are the unpopularity of Hitler and public resentment over Nazi treatment of the Jews.

The British survey finds voters who support the present Chamberlain government much more in sympathy with Germany than are voters of the opposition parties. Of those who approve the Chamberlain government 24 percent say they would side with Germany, while only 6 per cent of opposition voters express this sympathy.

Supreme Court Permits Labor Board to Withdraw Ford Case

By the United Press.

The National Labor Relations Board won a round in a long legal struggle with the Ford Motor Co. yesterday when the Supreme Court gave the board the right to withdraw certain litigation from the Federal Circuit Court, in Covington, Ky., to follow new procedure.

The court also:

Held that a State's right to prohibit or regulate importation of liquor was virtually unlimited.

Agreed to pass upon a lower court decision which declared that marketing provisions of the 1938 farm law were constitutional.

Held that the State of Washington could not tax the gross receipts of a company primarily engaged in interstate business.

Agreed to review litigation involving the right of Utah to tax the income of an employe of a Federal agency.

The Labor Relations Board had issued an order directing the Ford Motor Co. to reinstate 29 employes with back pay and to cease certain practices called "unfair." This led to litigation in the circuit court.

Withdrawal Sought

Later the board sought to withdraw its case and change procedure to avert criticism such as was expressed by the Supreme Court when it invalidated an Agriculture Department order against Kansas City livestock commission men last April 25.

The Ford Motor Co. promptly objected to withdrawal of the case.

Chief Justice Hughes wrote yesterday's decision affirming the lower court's ruling that the case could be withdrawn.

In another case the high court ruled that the States were given a free hand to bar or regulate liquor importations when the Federal prohibition law was repealed.

Liquor Regulation Upheld

The tribunal upheld Michigan and Missouri statutes barring alcoholic beverages shipped from States which enact liquor control laws deemed discriminatory.

Justice Brandeis wrote the opinion holding that the State's right to control liquor imports was not limited by either the commerce clause or the due process clause of the Federal Constitution.

The court passed over, at least until next Monday, cases involving constitutionality of the Tennessee Valley Authority act and the right of a State to approve the proposed child labor amendment after once having rejected it.

Congress Report Urges Expansion Of Va. Air Base

By the United Press.

Representative Darden (Democrat), of Virginia, said last night recommended improvements at Hampton Roads, if carried out, would make the Norfolk Naval Air Station "one of the greatest naval air bases in the world."

He promised to work with the Navy to that end.

The recommendations were made by a board, headed by Read Admiral Arthur J. Hepburn, which had been studying the Nation's needs for additional naval bases and strengthened defenses.

The report, submitted to Congress, urged acquisition of additional land known as "East Camp" in the Hampton Roads areea, facilities for two carrier groups and provision later for four; four plane patroy squadrons with provision later for six; for two utility squadrons, and complete overhaul facilities.

Sweeping Changes In Farm Law Urged By Senator Smith

By the Associated Press.

Senator Smith (Democrat), South Carolina, served notice yesterday he would seek complete revision of the Administration farm program, with emphasis on cotton and tobacco.

The veteran chairman of the Senate Agriculture Committee, whose re-election was opposed by some Administration officials, said he would offer his new farm bill within a few days and then call the Senate Agriculture Committee together to discuss it.

"I am resentful," the South Carolinian shouted in telling newsmen about his measure. "I am not going out of my way to show it, but when it gets in my way——"

Smith said he would propose a "parity price of about 15½ cents a pound" for a fixed amount of cotton production each year and then apportion this among States on a basis of past production.

Hopkins' Summons Embarrasses Aides

Pine Pledges Swift Justice, War on Gangs

U. S. Attorney Sets Record for Speed In first Year

By Howard F. Wentworth.

United States Attorney David A. Pine, starting his second year in office yesterday, issued an ultimatum to the forces of organized crime in Washington and announced plans for an intensified war against racketdom.

Beginning the new year with one of the cleanest criminal dockets in the history of District Court, Pine promised swift prosecution for future offenders.

"It is our aim during the coming months to reduce crime in Washington to a minimum by speedy prosecutions," said the district attorney. "I look forward to the time when our court calendar is so current that a person contemplating the commission of a crime will know that as soon as apprehended he will forthwith be tried.

To War on Gangs

Assembling his principal assistants yesterday, the stocky prosecutor "laid down the law."

"We are going to pay particular attention to crimes of a syndicated or premeditated nature," he said, referring to the thriving "numbers" racket and recent wave of armed robberies.

"We are going to strike at organized crime—gangs engaged in wholesale robberies and housebreakings and we intend to continue our policy of earnest efforts to reduce violations of the gambling statutes."

Establishes Record

"Organized rackets," he declared, "breed crime of a more serious nature—such as gang shootings, plotted robberies, murder and corruption. I serve fair warning on this type of criminal that he may expect prosecution to the full letter of the law."

In his first year in office—he was appointed in January of 1938—Pine has established a reputation for swift and certain action against lawlessness.

A seven-year record was hung up by the last grand jury when it was discharged Friday with only 17 cases pending. And of these, it was pointed out, seven cases were presented the day before the jury term expired. In the remaining 10 cases, witnesses could not be contacted due to absence from the city or illness.

Sees Crime on Wane

The usual number of cases left pending when a grand jury is discharged, it was explained, is seldom under 30 and often jumps as high as 100.

"This is an indication that our crime problem is pretty well under control," said Pine. "The trend appears to be steadily downward and I find that grand jury indictments always drop when court trials are speedy—hence my plans for swift prosecutions."

Only four major cases remain for court action as the year opens, Pine said. These include two alleged swindle cases, a retrial of the Warring brothers on conspiracy charges growing from their "numbers" racket and a first-degree murder case.

Pending criminal cases of all types—liquor law violations, narcotic offenses, etc.—number 316, according to a report by John Conliff, chief clerk of Pine's office. On these, 69 were set for trial during the Christmas holidays.

Pine stressed the fact that judges in the criminal division of District Court have been unable to devote full time to criminal cases because of the recent volume of civil matters. Criminal trials were halted between December 22 and the first of the new year.

In the police court branch of Pine's office the trial docket is also far smaller than on previous years. At the end of 1938 only 92 cases remained untried, according to Karl Kindelberger, head of this division.

A total of 1,974 indictments was returned by grand juries last year.

1,974 Indictments

A native of Washington, Pine is 47 years old and first became associated with the district attorney's office in February, 1934, when he was named assistant to Leslie C. Garnett, then United States attorney.

His fiery courtroom manner and fearless attitude toward crime and criminals has earned him a reputation as one of the country's ablest prosecutors.

British Rulers Allot 4 Days In June to U. S.

To Lengthen Stay In Canada, Making Coast-to-Coast Tour

London, Jan. 3.—King George VI and Queen Elizabeth will be in the United States on June 8, 9, 10 and 11, it was officially announced from Buckingham Palace tonight.

The royal couple's itinerary has been extended to include a coast-to-coast tour of Canada and a one-day visit to Newfoundland, Britain's oldest colony. Altogether, the King and Queen will be away from England for six weeks and three days, much longer than originally contemplated.

Their majesties will sail May 8 from Portsmouth, England, on the battle cruiser Repulse. They are due at Quebec May 15. From Quebec they will cross the Dominion to the Pacific Coast, and on their return will enter the United States at Niagara Falls, N. Y., June 8.

Reach Home June 22

On June 11 the King and Queen will leave the United States to resume their tour of Canada for a few days. They will rejoin the Repulse at Halifax, Nova Scotia, June 15, and sail for St. Johns, Newfoundland, where they will stop for one day, June 17. The Repulse will depart from St. Johns that evening and is scheduled to reach Portsmouth June 22.

No other details of the royal visit to the United States were disclosed.

A statement concerning the visit to Canada said:

"The King and Queen will leave Portsmouth in H. M. S. Repulse on May 8, arriving at Quebec on May 15.

"Their majesties will spend one night at Quebec; after a day in Montreal they will stay for three nights at Government House, Ottawa. The King and Queen will then cross Canada to the Pacific Coast, visiting successively Kingston, Toronto, Port Arthur, Fort William, Winnepeg, Regina, Calgary, Banff, Vancouver and Victoria.

Their Eastward Itinerary

"On their eastward journey their majesties will visit Jasper Park, Edmondton, Saskatoon, Sudbury, the Muskota Lakes district, London, Hamilton and Niagara Falls.

"At Banff, Victoria and Jasper Park, their majesties will have periods of complete rest.

"After four days in the United States, their majesties will resume their tour of Canada, visiting Sherbrooke, Moncton, Fredericton, St. John's and Halifax, whence they will leave in H. M. S. Repulse for Newfoundland on June 15. Having spent June 17 at St. Johns, Newfoundland, their majesties will sail for England that evening, reaching Portsmouth on June 22."

President May Delay Test on Choice of Smith

Indicates Possible Wait In Asking Confirmation For Labor Board

Faced with strong opposition from the American Federation of Labor and Senate conservatives, President yesterday indicated possible delay in submitting to the Senate for confirmation the nomination of Donald Wakefield Smith for member of the National Labor Relations Board.

Reports in semiofficial circles, meanwhile, were that the President had acceded to demands that Smith's reappointment be withdrawn.

Roosevelt did not confirm or deny these reports, although he attempted to convey the impression that they were groundless. At the same time, he disclosed considerable uncertainty as to when Smith's name would be forwarded to the Senate.

It has been known for some time that the President has been under strong pressure to withdraw Smith's name. The 49-year-old Pennsylvanian, a close friend of Senator Guffey, who is said to have been instrumental in having him named to the board, was given a recess reappointment last summer.

Vice President Garner, it is reported, has told Mr. Roosevelt that Smith will not stand a chance of confirmation.

Reports that Smith's name might be withdrawn gained support yesterday when John L. Lewis, head of the Congress of Industrial Organizations, called at the White House. He refused to say whether the President had asked him to back down in his insistence that Smith be formally nominated.

Nominations for recess appointments will be sent to the Senate tomorrow, he said. These will include appointment of Frank Murphy as Attorney General and Harry L. Hopkins as Secretary of Commerce.

Reports are that Smith may be given another job. The President, if he desires, can withhold submitting his name, allowing him to serve through the present session of Congress as a board member. In view of the impending fight in Congress against the board, this course is regarded as unlikely.

It was rumored that former Representative Lewis, Maryland, who was supported by the President for the Maryland Democratic Senatorial nomination against Senator Tydings, would be named to the board in Smith's place.

Rep. Goldsborough To Be D. C. Judge

Representative Thomas Alan Goldsborough (Democrat), of Maryland, is slated to be one of the two new judges in the United States Supreme District Court for Washington, it was learned yesterday from an authoritative source.

A favorable report has been drawn up at the Justice Department it is understood, and the appointment awaits only the approval of President Roosevelt.

Launching of U. S. Atlantic Air Line Blocked by Britain

The United States is pressing Great Britain for permission for American commercial planes to begin transatlantic service to England in the spring, it was learned yesterday.

A two-year-old reciprocity agreement, under which British and American companies equally would divide a schedule of four round-trip flights each week between the two countries, has been held up because of technical difficulties abroad.

British Imperial Airways, meantime, has announced it would start weekly airmail service from Southampton, England, to Montreal, Canada, before June.

Although the cabinet was not scheduled to meet until Friday it was summoned into secret session today and resigned at 11 a. m. today.

The resignation was announced shortly before noon by Akira Kazami, chief secretary of the cabinet.

Not Effective at Once

Domei (Japanese news agency) said that although the cabinet had resigned, the resignation would not become effective until after the prolonged Japanese New Year holiday.

The Japanese holidays extend through Thursday.

Prince Konoye's cabinet took office June 4, 1937, and has twice been revised. On May 26, 1938, two generals and a leader in finance were installed to replace men accused of weakness in the face of the "national emergency" in the campaign in China.

Cotton, tobacco, coal, leather, wool, industrial salts, all are now available to Japan on her own terms. By getting them from China, Japan reduces the amounts she must buy from other countries. It gives her a balance to use for armaments, development of foreign trade or other purposes, thereby improving her economic position.

Hengshan, Hunan Province, Central China (correspondence of the Associated Press).—Chinese staff officers expect a turning point in the Chinese-Japanese war when the struggle enters its "third phase," probably in about two years.

By that time, they believe, Chinese armies will be ready for counter-attack and "the Japanese military and economic morale will have been weakened."

The union demands renewal of closed shop agreements, increase in drivers' commissions, one week's vacation with pay, a nine-hour day, and "elimination of racketeering in the industry."

About 5,000 individually-owned cabs were not affected. Union officials claimed some 7,000 cabs had been halted within two hours after the strike call.

Ex-Insurance Head Given Theft Term

New York, Jan. 3 (AP).—James Gibbs, former president of the Excess Insurance Co. of America, was sentenced to 2½ to 5 years in prison today for larceny of $5,300 of his firm's money.

Actually, it was charged at his trial last month, the total amount misappropriated was about $80,000. Harry S. Haines, 37, former assistant treasurer of the concern, pleaded guilty to grand larceny and forgery.

Senator Glass Is 81 and Would 'Rather Ignore It, if Possible'

Peppery Virginia Veteran Will Be Acclained by Fellow Members Today; Still Wishes He Was 'Youngster of 40'

Senator Carter Glass, Virginia's "unreconstructed rebel," will be 81 years old today, but he would "rather ignore it, if possible."

The peppery Virginian will welcome his birthday just as he would meet an old friend who has been coming to see him a long time—in fact, he has "put his foot down against any fanfare" today, his office said.

But despite the wishes of the diminutive octogenarian, who in his 36 years of public life in Washington has never "backed water" in the face of any person or thing opposing his convictions, Glass will have to face the acclaim of his Senatorial colleagues today.

Letters of congratulation began pouring into his offices yesterday On the floor of the Senate, hands reached out to give the doughty Senator an affectionate pat on the shoulder.

Asked to pose for a picture yesterday on the floor of the Senate, Glass growled out of the corner of his mouth and then grinned as Vice President Garner walked up and placed an arm around his shoulder.

"There's nobody I'd rather have my picture taken with than Carter Glass," Garner said.

Glass, clad in a dark gray suit with a pin stripe, just grinned and said nothing. The knot of his tie was in its usual half-mast position in his collar.

Held in esteem, for his personal courage and sense of honor by both friends and those who oppose his policies, Glass is the oldest member of the Senate, which he entered in 1920.

His office staff, however, said his attitude toward any birthday celebration is as uncompromising as his outlook on anything not in keeping with the precepts of Jeffersonian democracy or traditional American institutions.

The staff and the employes of the Senate Appropriations Committee, which he heads, planned to present him with a gold and leather mounted traveling set, inscribed: "To the boss—from the gang."

"The Senator on his last birthday had only one complaint—that he would rather be 40 than 80," his secretary said. "There's no reason to believe he has changed."

Glass was born January 4, 1853, at Lynchburg, Va., and as a youth hurled stones at Federal Cavalry riding into Lynchburg in the war that nearly tore asunder the Nation he has since helped to build. His father was an officer in the Confederate Army.

Ceremonies December 23 at which a bronze plaque bearing his likeness was unveiled as a tribute to the part he played in "fathering" the Federal Reserve act climaxed all the celebrations Glass cares to attend in his honor, members of his office staff said.

The "grand old man" of the Senate would rather spend today with his memories as guests, but he doubtless will answer every greeting with his familiar crooked smile and a wisecrack.

Chevy Chase Plans Conn. Ave. Paving

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, Jan. 3.—Plans for improvement and resurfacing of Connecticut avenue, from the District of Columbia line to Chevy Chase Lake, were announced today by the State roads commission. Chairman J. Glenn Beall said engineers estimated the minimum repair work needed would cost approximately $155,000.

Patman to Push Chain Store Tax

Obtaining the coveted H. R. No. 1 designation for the antichain store tax bill he introduced in the House yesterday Representative Wright Patman (Democrat), Texas, made it plain that he intends to push the legislation.

Mr. Patman, it was said, has agreed to forego his desire to become a member of the powerful Ways and Means Committee, and will remain a member of the House Banking and Currency Committee.

Beatty Succeeds Faul as Chief of U. S. Farm Project

R. E. Beatty, formerly with the Rural Rehabilitation Division, yesterday was named manager of the Farm Security Administration's experiment in co-operative farming at Coolidge, Ariz. The appointment coincided with the first anniversary of the 60-family, 4,200-acre project.

Beatty succeeds R. A. Faul, who resigned January 1, charging there was little difference between the co-operative farm plan and the set-up in Soviet Russia.

The United States has invested about $500,000 in the project, an experiment "designed to interest private capital in mechanized, large scale co-operative farming."

Battling Nelson Sees White House, Misses President

Battling Nelson, the "Durable Dane" of the ring, who a generation ago held the world's lightweight championship, called at the White House executive offices late yesterday and was shown around by a member of the Secret Service.

He expressed a desire to see President Roosevelt, adding: "I would just like to drop in and shake hands with him."

"Bat" stopped by the White House press room long enough to demonstrate how he knocked out Joe Gans, Baltimore Negro battler, for the lightweight championship.

He says he stopped Gans three times.

Federal Secretary's Opinions On Bosses to Be Published

Saturday Evening Post Accepts Miss Torson's 'Nine-Point Program'

Willowy, blonde Gladys Torson, a Federal secretary who only wanted to be a good stenographer, got to thinking about her bosses one day and the Saturday Evening Post has paid for her introspection.

The idea was sprung when she worked for a lawyer in Honolulu. He just looked at her one day and said: "I don't guess you think your boss is a hero, do you?" Just like that. So she turned it over in her mind.

Seven months ago in Washington, where she works in the Bureau of Biological Survey, the thought came back; and it was conclusive that some bosses are heroes to their secretaries. Others aren't of course. All might be. Miss Torson went to a typewriter. "It's easy to write of something you feel you know so much about," she said yesterday.

Offers Nine-Point Program

She elaborated on a nine-point program for bosses. What she felt they should do to be heroes is nothing but the stuff they ought to know themselves, she said. If a boss is not an authority on grammar, there is no reason for trying to bamboozle his secretary into thinking he is. She knows. And he shouldn't start dictating five minutes before closing time. And he shouldn't chew a black cigar while he's dictating. It makes the hearing hard.

He shouldn't star-gaze out the window while dictating. If the secretary is interested enough in his business to want a good letter to go off, maybe he should be interested also. He shouldn't be too personal at one minute and too business-like in another.

She Asks Intelligence

He should assume his secretary is normal until she proves herself to be otherwise. And, above all things in consideration, he should be intelligent.

And it all can't be? was flashed at Miss Torson.

"Intelligence," flashed back Miss Torson, "it compensates for everything. You can tolerate a slave-driver if he is intelligent, or an indifferent boss. It stimulates, it compensates for all."

GLADYS TORSON

What is bosses' greatest failing? Simple. They all think they are good at dictation. Miss Torson sighed, negatively. And about the quick success, for she never before had tried to write anything:

"I'll try again, but maybe I'll never repeat. It was only because I knew bosses so well."

Sheppard Tells Senate WPA Coerced Votes

Sheppard

Progress Administration in such States," the report said in its 160-word concluding comment.

Morgenthau Slapped

"The committee believes that funds appropriated by the Congress for the relief of those in need and in distress have been in many instances diverted from these hign purposes to political ends. The committee condemns this conduct and recommends to the Senate that legislation be prepared to make impossible, so far as legislation can do so, further offenses of this character."

At one point, the committee slapped at Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau for supporting the position taken by M. Hampton Magruder, Maryland collector of internal revenue, in a speech to his non-civil service office employes in the Tydings-Lewis primary campaign.

The committee had declared Magruder acted illegally in indicating his support of Lewis. Morgenthau wrote the committee that Magruder's statement had the approval of the Treasury Department, and he saw no reason for action on his part.

Own Regulation Violated

"The Secretary of the Treasury took this position, although Mr. Magruder's activities were obviously a violation of the regulation issued by the Secretary of the Treasury prohibiting an official under the Treasury Department from using his position 'to interfere with an election or to affect the result thereof,'" said the Sheppard report.

The report not only submitted 15 recommendations for specific legislation to bar Federal funds and officials from campaign influence, but urged continuance of its studies through a committee to be set up by the Vice President at the start of each Congress to study campaign expenditures, campaign activities and use of governmental funds for the purpose of influencing primaries and general elections.

Franking Abuse Attacked

The committee also recommended legislation to prohibit "abuse" of the franking privilege, under which it said members have been mailing out, under their postage-free Congressional franks, documents and speeches taken from the Congressional Record but "never a part of the actual proceedings of the Congress." The report proposed a law "regulating more strictly the use of the franking privilege."

Other proposals for legislation:

Prohibitions on any political contributions by persons on Federal relief, or administering Federal relief funds, and a law against Federal relief officials using their authority to coerce the political actions of others.

Making it a felony for anyone knowingly through fraud or threat to deprive anyone of benefits due under Federal work relief.

U. S. Building Solicitation Hit

Making it a misdemeanor for anyone to turn over WPA lists to political candidates or their representatives.

Tightening of the United States code to bar contributions from Federal employes to any candidate for Congress, or anyone acting in their behalf, and a limitation on the amount of gifts any person may make to a candidate for Federal office.

Extension of restrictions against solicitation of Federal employes in Federal buildings to solicitations by letter and telephone.

Filing with the secretary of the Senate full statements of campaign receipts and expenditures by candidates for Senatorial office.

Prohibitions on any campaign contributions by any national bank or corporation in interstate commerce.

Extension of the Federal corrupt practices act to prohibit candidates from promising work, money or other benefits in connection with public relief.

Senator Barkley Cleared

The report further asked the Senate to determine whether contributions by Federal employes for political purposes, whether voluntarily or involuntarily made, should be permitted, and whether it should sanction group filing of expenditures by coalition or group tickets.

The report reviewed evidence of alleged WPA political activities in Kentucky, where Senate Majority Leader Barkley was the successful Democratic primary candidate against Gov. Chandler. Although Barkley was exonerated of blame, the committee substantiated the majority of 22 alleged instances of WPA political activities charged in a series of published articles on the Kentucky campaign. It pointed out that Hopkins, after an investigation instituted by himself, substantiated only two of the charges.

"The findings of the committee's investigator in reference to these charges indicated solicitation of WPA employes and officials for contributions to the campaign funds of Candidate Barkley and a systematic canvassing of WPA employes as to preference in the race," said the report.

Affidavits Contradictory

It called attention to the fact that Hopkins, after further investigation, disagreed with some of the findings of the committee, and added: "The committee, however, after still further investigation of its own, adhered to its own findings." The report also brought out that Hopkins obtained one "contrary affidavit" from a Kentucky witness, but when contacted by committee investigators a second time "sustained his first affidavit to the committee."

The committee sustained charges that the campaign committee of Gov. Chandler also "received contributions as the result of solicitations for contributions from State employes who were receiving salaries from funds derived wholly or in part from the Treasury of the United States." The committee said it found nothing to show that either Barkley or Chandler had any knowledge of the alleged activities for them.

In Pennsylvania, where Senator Davis (Republican), was opposed for re-election by Gov. Earle, the committee substantiated many of Davis' charges of activity by WPA officials and employes in the election.

Davis Charges Upheld

Allegations upheld in that State included charges of solicitation of truck drivers on WPA projects, transfer to distant projects of WPA workers wearing Republican buttons, sale of tickets to political meetings many miles distant to women on sewing projects, and orders received by WPA workers to change their registrations from Republican to Democratic, under threat of loss of their jobs.

After a WPA investigation of the Davis charges, Deputy WPA Administrator Williams had written the committee "there is not a scintilla of truth in any of the charges." The report made special note of Williams' rebuttal before listing charges the committee upheld.

Tennessee Drive Cited

In Tennessee, where former Senator Berry was an unsuccessful candidate for re-election against the successful Tom Stewart, "coalition" candidate, the committee reported "a vigorous effort throughtout the State to raise campaign funds by contributions from Federal employes in behalf of the coalition group."

The report charged funds were sought alike from civil service and relief employes "with circumstances in certain instances indicating intimidation and coercion, or efforts partaking of intimidation or coercion."

While the committee found a wide range of WPA political activity in Tennessee by adherents of both sides in the contest, it failed to sustain specific charges filed by Berry with the committee against his political opponents. As in other States, where the candidates were exonerated from blame, the committee said it found no evidence justifying any question of Stewart's right to his seat.

New Jersey Cleared

In Mayor Hague's Hudson County, New Jersey, where investigators were sent at behest of Senator Barbour (Republican), the committee found "indication of a possible wholesale system of padding the voting lists "in past election." But on the basis of findings of the committee's watchers at New Jersey polls in November, the committee reported that irrigularities in registration and voting predicted by Barbour "did not take place."

In Illinois, the committee said, 450 additional men were employed on Federal-aid highways between March 21 and April 29, most of whom were dismissed on the day following the primary and 70 of whom did no highway work at all.

The committee failed to sustain charges of WPA political activity preceding the primary elections and conventions in Maryland, Missouri and New York, and preceding the general elections in Indiana, New Jersey and Ohio.

Text of WPA Recommendations

I.

The committee in the course of its work has been compelled to give much of its attention to charges of undue political activity in connection with the administration and conduct of the Works Progress Administration in certain States. While many of these charges, after investigation, were not sustained, the committee nevertheless finds that there has been in several States, and in many forms, unjustifiable political activity in connection with the work of the Works Progress Administration in such States. The committee believes that funds appropriated by the Congress for the relief of those in need and distress have been in many instances diverted from these high purposes to political ends. The committee condemns this conduct and recommends to the Senate that legislation be prepared to make impossible, so far as legislation can do so, further offenses of this character.

II.

The committee recommends legislation prohibiting contributions for any political purposes whatsoever by any person who is the beneficiary of Federal relief funds or who is engaged in the administration of relief laws of the Federal Government. The committee also recommends legislation prohibiting any person engaged in the administration of Federal relief laws from using his official authority or influence to coerce the political action of any person or body.

III.

The committee recommends that section 19, title 1, of the present work relief act, making it a misdemeanor for any person knowingly, by means of fraud, force, threat intimidation, boycott, or discrimination on account of race, religion, political affiliations, or membership in a labor organization, to deprive any person of any of the benefits to which he may be entitled under the work relief act, be so amended as to make such violation a felony instead of a misdemeanor.

IV.

The committee recommends that all Federal relief acts should be so amended as to provide that any person who knowingly makes, furnishes, or discloses any list of persons receiving benefits under such acts or of persons engaged in the administration thereof, for delivery to a political candidate, committee, campaign manager, or employe thereof shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor.

V.

The committee recommends that section 208, title 18, of the United States Code be so amended as to prohibit not only the soliciting and receiving of political contributions by officials, employes and persons now named in that section, but also by anyone acting in their behalf.

VI.

The committee recommends that section 211, title 18, of the United States Code be so amended as to prohibit political contributions not only by Federal employes to any Senator or member of or delegate or Resident Commissioner to Congress, but also to any candidate for such offices, or to any person or committee acting with the knowledge and consent and specially in behalf of such Senator or Member of or Delegate to Congress or Resident Commissioner therein, or of any candidate for such office.

VII.

The committee recommends that there should be a limitation upon contributions which individuals may make in behalf of a candidate seeking election to Federal office.

VIII.

The committee recommends that section 209, title 18, of the United States Code, relating to solicitation for political contributions in any room or building occupied in the performance of official duties by any person in the employ of the Federal Government be so amended as to include solicitation by letter and telephone, as well as in person.

IX.

The committee recommends the adoption by the Senate of a rule requiring all candidates for the Senate to file with the Secretary of the Senate, in response to appropriate questionnaires, a full and complete statement of receipts and expenditures incurred by or in behalf of such candidates in their campaigns for nomination as well as for election.

X.

The committee recommends that section 313 of the Federal Corrupt Practices Act be so amended as to prohibit any contribution by any national bank, any corporation organized by authority of any law of Congress, or by any corporation engaged in interstate or foreign commerce of the United States, in connection with any primary or general election.

XI.

The committee recommends that subsection (c), section 309, of the Federal Corrupt Practices Act be so amended as to require candidates to report all their campaign expenditures, including those exempted in determining the amount they are allowed to spend under the law.

XII.

The committee recommends that section 310 of the Federal Corrupt Practices Act be so amended as to prohibit candidates from promising work, employment, money, or other benefits in connection with public relief.

XIII.

The committee recommends the enactment of a law regulating more strictly the use of the franking privilege.

XIV.

The committee recommends that the Senate take under consideration the question whether or not a contribution for political purposes made either voluntarily or involuntarily by persons in the employ of the Federal Government should be permitted.

XV.

The committee recommends that the Senate take under consideration the question of legislation in connection with coalition and group tickets.

XVI.

The committee recommends that the Senate adopt a rule authorizing the Vice President to appoint, at the beginning of each Congress, for the duration of said Congress, a Senate committee on investigation of senatorial campaign expenditures, campaign activities, and use of Governmental funds for the purpose of influencing primaries and general elections.

Daylight Bandit Holds Up Realty Dealer in Street

In a daring daylight holdup, a lone bandit yesterday robbed Charles D. Sager, jr., rent manager of Sager Real Estate, of $800 in the 1100 block F street northeast.

Sager said he had just collected the money from an apartment building at 1114 F street and had entered his automobile when the bandit, brandishing a gun, opened the automobile door.

Ninth Precinct police arrested a suspect soon after the robbery and were holding him for investigation. The police said he answered the description of the bandit, but had no money nor gun.

Baby Badly Hurt By Backing Truck

Leonard darted across the driveway in the path of a heavy truck operated by Herald Mitchell, 25, of 303 Greenwood drive, Takoma Park.

At Washington Sanitarium physicins found Leonard suffered a fractured skull. Mitchell was released on his personal bond but was fined $10.75 on charges of operating on an expired driver's permit.

tered in mass, all members standing, raising their right hands and shouting, "I do," at the same time.

Mrs. Taft Watches Son

House spectators had no way of knowing which member was Representative Rudolph G. Tenerowicz, whose Polish constitutents in Michigan elected him despite the fact that he is a former convict.

Neither had they any way of knowing which was Pius L. Schwert, the former New York Yankee catcher who took the seat of James M. Mead, now a Senator, or James H. Fay, one-legged war veteran who defeated John J. O'Connor, erstwhile chairman of the Rules Committee.

Mrs. William Howard Taft, widow of the late President and Chief Justice, was among Senate spectators and she smiled as her son, Robert Taft, took the oath as a Senator from Ohio. Capitol historians said it was the first time in 136 years that such a thing had happened, the last occasion being in 1803 when Mrs. John Quincy Adams saw her son take the Senate oath.

Party Lines Overlooked

Taft, wearing a cutaway, was escorted to the Vice President's rostrum by Senator Donahey, his Democratic colleague.

The spectacle of a Democrat escorting a Republican, or vice versa, was a common one at the Senate ceremonies. Senator Borah, Idaho Republican, walked down the aisle with D. Worth Clark, new Democratic Senator from that State; Senator Johnson escorted Sheridan Downey, the "Thirty dollars every Thursday" Democrat from California; Senator Guffey, most zealous of the New Dealers, marched along with his arch conservative colleague, James J. Davis, and Senator La Follette performed a like courtesy for Alexander Wiley, a Republican who helped smash the La Follette organization in Wisconsin.

Senator Van Nuys, of Indiana, who frustrated a "purge" attempt based on his Supreme Court fight, was accompanied down the aisle by one of those who favored kicking him out of the Senate—his colleague, Senator Minton.

Many Former Members Back

Senator Maloney (Democrat), of Connecticut, had the rare experience of escorting a man who was born in the same town and went to the same school, John A. Danaher, Republican, who defeated Augustine Lonergan.

Kleig lights burned in the House chamber for the opening session, and in their glare onlookers saw many former members who, having gone down in various Roosevelt landslides, staged comebacks last November.

Among them were John C. Schafer, of Wisconsin, who has the loudest voice in Congress; Clarence McLeod, "baby member" back in the Harding Administration, now worrying about thinning hair; Chester C. Bolton, of Ohio, and Noble I. Johnson, of Indiana, who defeated Virginia Jenckes.

Blonde Member a Wit

With Mrs. Jenckes and Mrs. Nan Honeyman, of Oregon; missing from the Democratic side, the Republicans were boasting a new woman member, Representative Jessie Sumner, of Illinois. The 40-year-old former county judge, a striking blonde, campaigned for economy and against "one-man government."

"I know there are a lot of things I have to learn," Mrs. Sumner said. "Don't ask me what I'm going to accomplish this session. What do I think of President Roosevelt? I am here to bury Caesar—not to praise him."

The Rev. Dr. James Shera Montgomery, chaplain of the House, asked in his opening prayer that "brotherly love, patriotism and statesmanship prevail among all members." All these were in evidence yesterday, but how long the brotherly love can last with a Presidential election coming in 1940 is something else.

Belgian Musicians To Give Recitals

Marcel Maas, who toured the United States last season, has been heard as soloist with the principal European orchestras. Alfred Dubois, who is making his first visit to this country, is known extensively in Europe.

News of Capital Night Clubs

By Mary Harris.

Spain came to the White House last night when La Trianita took "time out" between her appearances at Shoreham's Blue Room to present two groups of dances before guests at the Diplomatic Dinner.

Two of La Trianita's White House dances, the "Mirando a Espana" (with castanets) and the "Zandra Gitana" (Spanish gypsy dance with finger cymbals), are included in her Blue Room program this week. The remaining three were more in the classic mood, and included Granados' "Dance No. 5," "Reina de la Moreira" (meaning "Queen of the Moors") with finger snaps emphasizing the tempo, and "Tango Macareno" done in Spanish gypsy rhythm, a contrast to the familiar Latin-America tango. Costumes worn by La Trianita included the black taffeta with many white lace frills which she is wearing in her Shoreham appearances, also a gypsy costume of orange and green organdie.

Note. Barnee and the lads of the Shoreham orchestra are happy as larks over their new singer and playmate, Connie Randall, vivid Washington girl who's been around in radio and the movies. Connie can not only sing, she can "sell" a song. When she starts to Suzy-Q and put out those sugar blues simultaneously, the dancers start to linger around the bandstand.

Anne Kiess, newest society nightingale, made a highly successful and charming vocal debut at the Heigh Ho on Monday evening. This after two weeks of battling a heavy cold which had delayed her originally scheduled appearance.

While the crowd was naturally Social Register-ish and very friendly to Anne, she needed no such break. Her voice is low, sweet and thrill-y, and she has a natural gift for phrasing although she's never taken a singing lesson in her life.

Inside stuff. That toy muff of rose-red velvet was more than a matching accessory to Anne's gown. It concealed a full set of lyrics. Anne had visions of suddenly forgetting the words to such new numbers as "Get Out of Town." It turned out she didn't need the muff at all.

Date Book: Thursday, January 5 (that's tomorrow). "Tropical Night" at Cafe Caprice. Hula dancing on the bar by a masked mystery beauty. Tropical songs by Marco Rosales, semitropical songs by Peggy Townsend, demitropical songs by Jack Kerr. Special "tropical cocktail" invented for the evening. You'll be in a tropical mood, too, when it's all over.

Friday, January 6. The Biltmore Boys will invade Shar-Zad with heavy swing artillery. They'll put down a barrage of novelty numbers, go over the top with sharp tangos and rumbas, mop up with smart dance rhythm. You'll probably surrender—and love it.

Tuesday, January 10. Mary de Sibour will make her initial appearance in the Pall Mall Room. She'll also set a record by being the first society singer not heralded as a "debutante." Mary will garner glamor and that "different" quality as a "missus" and the mother of two youngsters.

Wednesday, January 11. Another of those pack-'em-in style revues at the Hour Glass at the afternoon cocktail hour. This one will feature skiing and skating costumes from Sun Valley.

It's a circus, an aviary of birds of paradise and a jitter-bug "jam session" at Bamboo Gardens this week. All due to those Pearl Magley Cocktail Shakers and Lolette and Winston. The Cocktail Shakers are more than a beauty chorus. They're dancers, acrobats and comedians. First they appear as jitter-bugs, then they're transformed to parading bird-girls, finally they bounce out in white satin clown costumes and stage a series of acrobatic-comic stunts that would grace any circus. Also strictly in the modern tempo are dancers Lolette and Winston who offer a speedy "ballroom tap" and a "jive session."

Ringside Camera: At Lounge Riviera: Sports Writer Bob Considine and Mrs. Considine with Radioman Arch McDonald and Mrs. McDonald. Entertaining another happy party was Hardie Meakin (manager of RKO-Keith's) and Mrs. Meakin . . . At Heigh-Ho: Publicist Robert Rodenburgh and Count Oleg Cassini, rooting for Anne Kiess . . . At Lotus: Representative Harry R. Sheppard, of California; New Dealer Eugene R. (Reds) Leggett and Public Relations Man Sam Jones—all vastly enjoying the Elaine Seidler "Jewel Parade" . . . Those returning Washington collegiates now replacing visiting undergrads at the ringside of the Metronome Room.

Manager Russell A. Conn of the Ambassador still smiles when he remembers how the crowd lined up clear down to Fourteenth street trying to get into the Hi-Hat on New Year's Eve. Oscar put the folks into the Hi Hat, the Gold Room, in the lobby, then in the corridors. After that, even Oscar was baffled. He was heard muttering, "Why didn't they build this place with rubber walls?"

Note: At what night spot was the orchestra kept playing until 2 o'clock last Sunday afternoon? Sorry, but no can tell.

New Year Addenda: The Brown Derby's Sunday night New York party was a pack-in, proceeded appropriately to the tunes and gags of "Hellzapoppin."

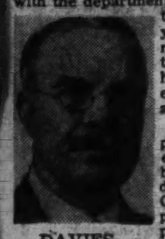
Davies Retires After 57 Years At Woodward's

Tribute Paid Store Official by Executives On 78th Birthday

William Davies, general merchandise manager of Woodward & Lothrop who has been associated with the department store for more than 57 years, yesterday announced his retirement. It was his seventy-eighth birthday anniversary.



DAVIES

A tribute was paid to the veteran executive by the Saturday Morning Group, composed of company officials, and the Twenty-Year Club, of which Davies was a charter member and past president. On behalf of the two organizations, William W. Everett, vice president and general manager of Woodward & Lothrop, presented Davies with a gold watch.

The retirement will go into effect on the first day of March, following a month's vacation in Florida. He will then receive a company pension. Davies lives at 1744 Q street northwest.

Davies first joined Woodward & Lothrop on February 18, 1880; seven days before the store opened for business at its original location, 705 Market place.

He soon rose to the post of buyer, and in 1893 became manager of the men's furnishings department. In 1902 he was sent to the New York office, and remained there for 16 years, a great part of this period as manager of the office. Davies returned to the Washington store in February, 1918, to become general merchandise manager, a position he has held since.

Donald Woodward, president of the firm yesterday issued a special bulletin saying, "we shall miss those outstanding characteristics that distinguish the man . . . We feel our organization to have been singularly fortunate to have had the benefit of close association with him and recognize his substantial contribution to the success of this business."

During this six-month period, the report charged, the ship was used "for unauthorized purposes exclusively," with exception of the week-end of April 27, 1935.

Elliott, a former Republican Representative from Indiana, cited this phase of his report as evidence of the need for the closest kind of audit of expenditures and receipts of the Federal Government.

'Appeasement' Will Bring War, British Legislator Says Here

Hitler and Duce Will Always Want More, Dr. Summerskill Asserts

EDITH SUMMERSKILL, M. P.

Britain's foreign policy of appeasement will lead inevitably to a general war in Europe, Dr. Edith Summerskill, labor member of the British parliament, declared yesterday.

"Europe is learning that those two monsters, Hitler and Mussolini, are insatiable," she explained. "No matter how much is given them, they will demand more."

Mrs. Summerskill is touring the United States to raise funds for relief of the civilian population of Spain.

Premier Daladier's stiff rebuffs of Italy's demands for part of the French colonial empire were symptomatic of the new and stronger foreign policy slowly taking shape in the European democracies, she said.

She added that a strong stand by the British government on the question of Italian "volunteers" in Spain, probably would have mitigated the harshness of the Munich agreement and prevented the decline of British prestige.

"Nine British ships have been bombed since Munich," she pointed out, "and British merchant shipping has declined 60 per cent in the last few years while that of Germany has risen 60 per cent, chiefly in the carrying trade between former British markets and Germany."

Although her own election occured shortly after Anthony Eden resigned as foreign secretary and was a direct repudiation of the government foreign policy, Dr. Summerskill declared Eden has been "disappointing" since he left the British government because "he has not rallied the members of his own party who are opposed to the present foreign policy."

Mrs. Summerskill was accompanied by Mrs. John Fischer and Mrs. Theresa Liss, members of the governing committee of the Washington Friends of Spanish Democracy sponsoring her visit.

highly-specialized studies in tissue metabolism and other fundamental problems.

Dr. Dean Burk, now a research scientist in the Department of Agriculture, will undertake the project as a fellow of the National Cancer Institute, the advisory council having voted him that ranking yesterday. His investigations will be under Dr. Vincent du Vigneaud, professor of bio-chemistry at Cornell Medical School and formerly a member of the faculty of the George Washington University Medical School.

States Enact Programs

Dr. Parran informed the council that six States have enacted cancer control programs and several others are considering such legislation. The institute is co-operating with these States, he said, as well as with the American College of Surgeons, with reference to training policies, and the American Society for the Control of Cancer on health education.

The Surgeon General said physicists are devising shipping containers to meet new express regulations. Companies are wary, he said, because of the damage radium can do to photographic films and plates in the same car.

Another complication, said Dr. Parran, is the fact that much red tape attends the granting of insurance to radium borrowers for protection of the Government against loss or damage.

British Plans Cited

In a separate report to the council, Dr. Carl Voegtlin, chief of the National Cancer Institute, pointed out that although the law authorizes an annual appropriation of $700,000, only $400,000 has been allowed by the bureau of the budget for 1939-40.

"It is of interest," he declared, "that the British government has just introduced a bill in the House of Commons which provides for a nation-wide cancer service. In full operation the additional total cost will be $3,500,000 yearly, in addition to a large sum for the purchase of radium.

"On a per capita basis, this would mean at least $12,000,000 for the United States."

Yesterday's meeting of the council was the first for two newly appointed members, Dr. Mont R. Reid, professor of surgery at the University of Cincinnati Medical School, and Dr. James Murphy, director of cancer studies of the Rockefeller Institute.

Man Charged With $11,000 Oil Fraud Against Woman

Parkersburg, W. Va., Jan. 3 (AP).—An $11,000 "Mexican oil lease" swindle was charged against 46-year-old James L. Skinner today by Detective Sergt. C. H. Warder, of Washington, who took Skinner into custody.

Warder said Skinner was charged with accepting jewelry, property and cash from Julia M. Higgins, of Washington, last summer in return for what he termed worthless Mexican oil leases.

vestigation disclosed, however, that the couple maintained a house in the country and employed a butler.

In another case, a single man, employed at the Capitol at $320 per month, lived with his mother, who received a social security old age assistance grant.

Lewis expressed the belief that a relief "ceiling" should be established of $100 per month of income from other sources. Only in exceptional cases requiring special approval, he said, should assistance be given a household having other income in excess of this sum.

The District Commissioners, meanwhile, adopted an opinion by Elwood H. Seal, corporation counsel, which would leave to the district attorney's office the decision as to who should sign informations in relief fraud cases believed to merit prosecution.

Information Problem Solved

This action was intended to clear up the uncertainty as to who should institute prosecution—a problem which has been a barrier to court proceedings. Seal pointed out that the Board of Public Welfare felt someone other than case workers should sign an application for a warrant for arrest and prosecution.

Meanwhile, United States Attorney David A. Pine directed two of his assistants, Harry L. Underwood and Karl Kindleberger, to prepare a summary of any relief fraud cases they may have on file.

District families in both starvation and luxury income levels receive aid for dependent children, Lewis charged yesterday in the third installment of his report.

Nineteen families with incomes of $175 per month, he declared, obtain from the public assistance division of the Board of Public Welfare social security grants for dependent children.

Lewis charged these families also receive an average of $48 per month from public assistance sources. Moreover, he said, "the fair value of surplus commodities" produced averages about $6 per family, increasing total average income of the families to $229 per month.

Investigation, he said, revealed that 1 per cent of the local families receiving home care have income from other sources totaling about $375 per month.

In contrast to this picture, Lewis said, 36 per cent of households receiving social security grants for dependent children, and 8.1 per cent of those receiving home care, are "continually facing starvation."

Pyramiding Frequent

Investigators, he said, frequently ran across cases of pyramiding and duplication of different kinds of Federal aid among District relief clients.

"There are many households into which more than one public assistance grant comes into it," he declared. "There are many cases in which a WPA wage or Government job income flows into the household in addition to some type of public assistance grant or grants."

The board recommended establishment of submarine bases at Guam, San Juan, Puerto Rico; Balboa, Canal Zone; Unalaska, Midway, Wake and Kodiak Islands, all in the Pacific; New London, Conn.; Hampton Roads, Va., and Treasure Island, San Francisco, Calif.

Destroyer bases were recommended for San Diego, Calif., and Philadelphia. Mine bases, for storage of depth charges, torpedo warheads and aerial bombs as well as mines, were urged for Yorktown, Va.; Hawthorne, Nev., and Mare Island.

Discussing when the program should be executed, the board said all the projects recommended are required in connection with the increased armament authorized by last year's naval expansion act "and should be in existence when the ships and aircraft authorized by that act are completed."

Only one major naval air base exists on the Atlantic seaboard—the one at Hampton Roads, Va.—the board said, adding it would be "entirely inadequate" to serve the peacetime needs of the fleet.

Plan Lost in 1938

The Hepburn Board made no estimate of the cost of the building program, explaining that the nature of its study made such an effort "impracticable."

It was recalled, however, that a much smaller program was submitted to Congress last year with estimates totaling about $28,000,000. That program was abandoned shortly before adjournment.

Members of the House Naval Committee said most of the projects would require Congressional authorization but predicted there would be scant opposition.

"The most important defense measure we can now take," said Representative Maas (Republican), of Minnesota, senior minority member of the committee, "is the establishment of adequate naval air bases. It is solely a defense measure and that's all we're interested in."

Meanwhile, Congress was asked to go on record in favor of a world naval holiday and a conference to limit armaments.

Representative Ludlow (Democrat), of Indiana, introduced a resolution urging the United States to take the lead in obtaining a disarmament agreement. The measure advocated suspension of naval construction until January 1, 1941, and a limitation conference in Washington next summer.

War Games Start Today

Los Angeles, Jan. 3 (AP).—The United States fleet was geared for battle tonight.

Dawn will find the annual war games on, with fighting forces moving to sea from southern California bases for operations which will continue into June.

Large areas of the Pacific and Atlantic Oceans, and the Caribbean Sea, will be the field of "war" in the yearly test of the fighting fitness of 191 ships and 923 aircraft which compose the fleet.

Admiral C. C. Bloch, cmomander in chief, who will be chief umpire aboard his flagship, the dreadnaught Pennsylvania, stressed the fact that selection of the Caribbean area for problem and extension of operations into the Atlantic was made more than a year ago by the general board of the Navy in the regular course of shifting scenes of maneuvers, and to take the fleet to the East Coast for participation in the World's Fair at New York.

The nature of Problem XX, as usual in these annual war games, is secret. Last June Representative Izac (Democrat), San Diego, Calif., member of the Foreign Affairs Committee, expressed belief that it would involve a hypothetical situation in which this country is attacked by a coalition of German and Japanese fleets.

An attack and defense of the Panama Canal will precede Problem XX. The battle of the Caribbean will be fought between mid-February and the first week in March, with Admiral E. C. Kalbfus in command of the White fleet, the main battle force, and Vice Admiral Adolphus Andrews in command of the fast-striking scouting force.

Washington Is Grateful

Senator Overton's first move as chairman of the Senate sub-committee on District appropriations warmly commends him to the local community. The uncertain fiscal relation between the Federal and District governments is a source of constant friction. If the Senator's leadership in the movement to solve that dilemma is successful, he will earn the permanent gratitude of Washington, to say nothing of the acclaim which will be his on Capitol Hill.

The absence of any principle in determining the Treasury payment toward District expenses becomes steadily more irksome. In recent years the so-called lump-sum contributions have had no relationship either to the Federal Government's obligation to the Capital or to the needs of the District as a community. Indeed, the tendency has been to slash the lump sum at every opportunity and to permit no increase even when expansion of the local budget has become essential.

In justice to both the District and the Federal Government some more orderly and equitable way of dividing expenses for development and operation of the Capital City should be sought without further delay. Congress has rejected the idea that a definite percentage of Washington's expenditures should be voted from the Federal Treasury. Various schemes to fix District taxes at about the level paid in other cities of similar size, and let Congress make up the balance, have failed for want of basis on which to make such comparisons. The time is ripe for an entirely different approach.

Senator Overton's belief that untaxed Federal property in the District may be used as a base for a permanent but flexible fiscal formula is shared by many students of the problem. The Jacobs committee pointed out in 1936 that 55 per cent of Washington's land area is tax exempt. That places an extremely heavy burden on the smaller area which is subjected to taxation. Moreover, the Government and tax-exempt institutions are rapidly acquiring additional property. Since the total District acreage cannot be expanded, this means that more revenue must continuously be raised from a progressively smaller area of taxable land.

It will not be an easy task to work out a fiscal formula on the basis of tax-exempt property alone. Other factors may also have to be taken into consideration. But if there is determination to explore the issue objectively, Congress will certainly be able to devise a more reasonable financial arrangement than that now prevailing. Incidentally, some valuable suggestions as to the Government's share of the District's expenses ought to be forthcoming from the current investigation of local taxes by the Joint Congressional Committee on Internal Revenue Taxation.

A "Feather-Bed" Suit

The railroads of the country are yearly mulcted of large sums because of union rules and regulations which force them to pay for unnecessary work and work which actually has not been performed, a practice well described as "featherbedding." What the railroads regard as a "glaring example" of such penalty rules is revealed by a suit brought in the local Federal court by the Washington Terminal Co., owner of Union Station.

The Terminal company seeks a declaratory judgment to determine whether it can be required to employ special additional switch-engine crews, as the rail unions demand, to back empty passenger trains out of the station into the storage yard. It maintains that if this demand is met it will be forced either to bring extra switch engines into the station, or else to employ an extra yard crew. Not only would a useless expenditure of money result, but if extra yard engines were employed, operations would be seriously hampered, it is stated, in periods of heavy travel.

Notwithstanding these objections, the claim of the unions was recently sustained by a National Railroad Adjustment Board set up under the Railway Labor Act. Its decision held that the locomotive enginemen and firemen employed by the Terminal company have an exclusive right to perform work connected with moving empty passenger trains, although during the thirty years since the terminal was put to use this work has been done by the employes of the railroads entering the station. As a result of this decision the enginemen and firemen employed in operating and firing yard engines and performing switching services are demanding pay which they claim is due them under the Adjustment Board's interpretation of their contracts.

The importance of this case, not only to the local Terminal company but to those in every part of the country, is obvious. The right of the Adjustment Board to change practices of long standing is contested. Aside from the purely legal aspects of the controversy, however, the decision is open to challenge as an unfair imposition which will add to the handicaps from which rail transportation systems suffer in competition with other carriers.

The decision in this case will no doubt increase the pressure to amend the Railway Labor Act so that the roads may petition the courts to set aside decisions of adjustment boards. As the law stands, no method is provided whereby the employing company can directly challenge such decisions in court. The only remedy open to the Washington Terminal Co., therefore, was to bring a suit in equity naming its own employes as defendants, and asking for a declaration of the rights and legal relations of the parties to the controversy.

Light On The WPA

As a result of its inquiries the Senate Committee on Campaign Expenditures concludes that "funds appropriated by the Congress for those in need and distress have been in many instances diverted from those high purposes to political ends." In support of this assertion the committee report contains a wealth of material to sustain charges of exploitation of WPA workers in many States.

Particularly arresting and scandalous are the flagrant abuses unearthed in Kentucky, where, it is said, the candidacy of Senator Barkley for the Democratic Senatorial nomination was aided by contributions not only from the WPA, but from employes of the National Bituminous Coal Committee, the Bureau of Internal Revenue, the Bureau of Accounts of the Treasury Department, the HOLC, and the FHA.

Contributions were made at the solicitation of individuals and not by members of the Senator's campaign committee. However, it appears that those contributing well understood that the funds would be turned over to the campaign committee. Moreover, the investigation revealed that in many instances men not supporting Senator Barkley's candidacy were discharged.

In western Kentucky, the evidence discloses that the entire supervisory force of the WPA was directed toward placing in the hands of the Barkley campaign committee's county chairmen a list of the names and addresses of over 17,000 certified WPA workers, showing all legal voters in their families, whether registered and if so, where. The purpose of such information does not require explanation.

Senator Barkley has stated that he did not use public funds or political patronage in behalf of his campaign for nomination. And the committee "has found nothing to show" that he had any knowledge of the persons soliciting contributions from Federal employes in his behalf within the ranks of WPA. Consequently it "finds no ground upon which to recommend any challenge to the right of Senator Barkley to the Senate seat to which he has been elected."

The very fact that the Senator could benefit from the contributions of WPA employes while maintaining an aloofness that permits him to disclaim all responsibility is the best possible proof that legislation prohibiting such contributions would not prevent them. In this report of the Sheppard committee, therefore, critics of the WPA will find unanswerable arguments to support demands for a complete transformation of the Federal relief system.

There are innumerable ways of exerting political pressure that elude detection at least until it is too late to take effective action. A stiffening of the law relating to corrupt practices, and its extension to persons benefiting from Federal relief funds or engaged in administration of Federal relief laws, is clearly not enough.

When Congress reads the sordid details of the exploitation of WPA workers, it is to be hoped that it will not hesitate to draw the one conclusion that must be deduced from the evidence. Namely, that the WPA is a menace to decency in political life as well as a form of relief which, under the newly-appointed Secretary of Commerce, was grossly wasteful and administratively incompetent.

Foreign Policy Data

In an address before the annual meeting of the Political Science Association last week Cyril Wynne, chief of the division of research and publication of the Department of State, called attention to a little-known but invaluable activity carried on by that branch of the Government.

The successful conduct of foreign policy in a democracy must rest on popular understanding of the background, motivation and ultimate aims of that policy. Toward this essential task of public enlightenment the Department of State has for the past ten years successfully addressed itself. There is probably not a foreign office in the world whose publications are as nearly contemporaneous with events, or as complete, as those of our Department of State.

The range of publications which the department now issues is remarkable. Best known, perhaps, are the weekly press releases dealing with current developments which, in their present pamphlet format, are receiving increasingly wide acceptance. But since present policy is an outgrowth of past policies, the work done by the department in familiarizing the public with the Nation's diplomatic history is equally valuable.

The foreign relations series, for instance, provides a substantially complete record of our dealings with foreign governments in days gone by. The period covered by these successive volumes is approximately 15 years prior to the date of publication. But this gap, Mr. Wynne announces, will be narrowed just as soon as foreign governments give their consent to the release of official correspondence with them in more recent years.

The Department of State is also engaged on a notable project to publish the complete records of the Paris Peace Conference, the sole obstacle at present being the absence of necessary appropriations. Another forthcoming publication is the revised digest of international law which is being prepared by Green H. Hackworth, legal adviser to the department.

Still another of many undertakings on the calendar is the Territorial Papers of the United States, a publication which, when completed, will consist of some 30 volumes. And from the Government presses there steadily pours forth a vast number of miscellaneous Department of State publications, all of them of interest to all those anxious to keep informed in the increasingly vital field of American foreign policy.

Friends In Need

Regardless of the form of government in power there, the German people can never forget the humanitarian work done in their country by the American and British Quakers in the dark days immediately following the war.

Almost before the echoes of the guns had died away, long before the blockade was lifted, representatives of this faith were in Berlin, making arrangements for the nation-wide feeding of undernourished German children. The work was soon extended to include the serving of meals and the establishment of social centers in the disorganized German universities. Many a German who was a student twenty years ago, many a young man who was then a child, is still deeply grateful for the tactful, self-effacing assistance extended in 1919, and subsequent years, by the Society of Friends.

So it is not surprising that Dr. Rufus M. Jones, the chairman of the American Friends Service Committee, received "only the greatest co-operation" from German officials during the self-imposed mission to the Third Reich from which he has just returned. The purpose of this elderly professor of philosophy and his two Philadelphia associates was to secure Nazi approval for a comprehensive program of assistance to the German Jews. And the success of the mission should encourage active co-operation elsewhere in the effort to which the Friends Service Committee is now preparing to devote a major proportion of its resources.

A two-fold arrangement has been concluded between this committee and the German government. Quaker commissioners will be received in that country to oversee distribution of relief to helpless "non-Aryan" Germans, conducted in much the same way as was the Quaker assistance given to Germans without discrimination during the post-war period. And provision has also been made for the orderly expatriation of as many as 150,000 Jewish children to be directed, under the supervision of the Friends Service Committee, to homes in other countries which will be willing to receive and assimilate them into a friendlier national life.

Dr. Jones indicates that the German government can be counted upon to let these children leave without interfering with such assistance as their families are still able to provide. And he further observes that many German people are now secretly aiding the Jews of that country, "though they do not dare show too publicly how profoundly they are opposed to the policy of cruelty and outbreaks of violence."

If the German government and people are willing to co-operate in this typically constructive Quaker effort, it cannot be imagined that other governments, and other peoples, will prove more laggard. Selected children, brought under such careful auspices to new and happier environment, will prove a source of strength to the communities which give them haven. Properly viewed, it will be a privilege for the democracies to accept these innocent exiles and help to build their lives anew.

The Society of Friends, which puts its precepts into practice and accomplishes good works out of all proportion to its membership, has again given a challenging lead to Christians of all other sects. Here is a note of promise, ringing the more clearly for the discords of hate, of bitterness and of crumbling moral values with which the world is filled.

Schools As Melting Pots

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The reactions from Southern leaders of education to the Supreme Court's decision in regard to mixed education of white and colored students in professional schools is an indication of the progress the new South has made in liberal thought.

The writer was born in the North and graduated from the mixed public schools and a professional course in a leading university. Since graduation, his professional work has been in association with men of the dominent group.

Our observations are that colored youths can win the respect of their fellow students, regardless of race, and form friendships that last throughout life, and yet not seek to mix in the social life of their friends' families. The much feared intermarriage of the races is only a scarecrow raised by the Southern demagogue who holds office only by keeping alive outworn social hatreds.

The mixed schools are one of the greatest institutions of this melting pot that refines our crude nature and turns out liberal citizens who have learned to know and respect all races and creeds of their fellow men. For in the competitions of the intellect they discover that no race has innate superiority.

If our democracy should perish it would be due to a struggle between those who profit by special privileges and the masses whom they despise and exploit. The only remedy is for the upper class to know and appreciate the viewpoints of the masses. This can be learned only by contacts in the classrooms and in the atmosphere of our universities where the most intellectual of all groups meet and through research into each others' problems acquire sympathy and tolerance for all. Only then can they extend to all citizens alike the advantages of our democracy in both Governmental and commercial enterprises.

A National University

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your correspondents are right, there should be a nonsectarian college in Washington for citizens' sons and daughters who cannot afford the high tuition of local institutions. But there should also be a great national university in connection with the libraries and laboratories of the Government.

Such a university would draw nationally known scholars as well as highly technical men from the various departments of Government. Its standards would be above question; it would teach and engage in research uncontrolled for science's sake; it would develop new techniques in governmental administration associated with a department of education; it would soon be the greatest educational institution in the land, a central school drawing advanced students from the State universities.

With billions spent for relief, why can't Washington have educational relief? Why not carry out the old idea of George Washington.

Border Playboys At Casa Grande

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In going through some old papers I found the following letter and remembered how I happened to have it. I lived for two years on a small frontier post near the Mexican border, where the vast ranch land stretched out like an ocean, bounded in the far distance by strange foreign-looking mountains.

One morning, while taking a walk, I saw a piece of paper blowing about on the ground. There was writing on it, and having the usual modicum of feminine curiosity, I picked it up. And that is how I became the proud possessor of this really wonderful letter. It has given me such delighted amusement I thought it worth sending to you, that others might share.

Here it is, faithfully reproduced:

Casa Grande, Ariz.

Dear Marge:

Pardon the paper & Stuff. Circumstances prevent me from getting any better today. And Lady, if you even see me alive again it will be the eighth wonder of the world. This country is much too playful.

The last Saturday in Don Luis, a bunch of us left after the show and went to Old Mexico. There was a celebration of some kind going on and we joined the fun. About 1:30 a. m. I was dancing with a mucho bueno senorita and getting along fine when some greaser took a dislike to me and came after me. "Yoicks and Tantivy."

These Mexican playboys all carry knives, so Clyde backed up, pronto. One of the carnival boys saw me and clipped the Mex under the ear. One down, and then it started. Whoops, my dear. A knife ripped my tie about two inches below my throat. I grabbed a beer bottle and crowned that spik before he could cut any more capers. Then we all ran like hell. We got across the border just before the Mexican guards got there. Mexico, the land of beauty and romance. Oh, Yeah! A good time was had by all.

Then to keep from going stale, we had a "Hey Rube" on the lot Sunday night. A "Hey Rube" is a fight, and how! It lasted an hour and a half. Most of the stands were torn down and spread around, and lots of people got hurt. I was one. The fight had been going about 20 minutes when somebody slapped me on the head with a two by four and this little boy slept for about two hours. Some fun, eh wot? Having a good time, wish you were here. All of which has been over a week ago, so most of the marks are gone. That would never do.

Some kid came around yesterday with a horse and let me ride him, the horse, I mean. He taught me how to throw a lasso, too. Sooooo—I tried to lasso a big steer from the horse. The horse was running, the steer was running. The rope wasn't tied to the saddle. I held the end of it. I roped the steer—said steer went one way—horse went another. Those who were watching said I only went about 30 feet through the air. I still insist it was 300. I am going to try taking meat way from hungry lions next—I might as well get killed now as later. Still, it's lots of fun.

Hi! Ho! there goes the old dinner gong. See you later.

I still don't know where you're at, if you're still single or anything else. Crazy as ever.

CLYDE.

The original is written in pencil, of course, on a large square of brown wrapping paper. There is a small red stain on one side, which might be strawberry jam from "dinner," but which I am pleased to think is some of Clyde's gore.

For Saner Poker

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In re poker and the article "Degenerate Poker," recently published in your paper, permit me to add my pennyworth. Modernizing, streamlining, or "jazzing up" of the game by the introduction of dealer's choice, meaning anything from a flock of wild cards, all the way through "down the River, Pete," "Baseball," "Spit," down to the invidious of them all, "High-Low," is certainly but surely undermining the noble art of an erstwhile regal game.

When you are holding a hand that cannot be beaten—but let me give you an instance. I recently got rung into a seven-card deal. Deuces and one-eyed jacks are wild—and of course the joker! I hold the ace of hearts down. I have the ten, jack and king of hearts faced. By a miracle I have the queen of hearts dealt down as the last card. A hand of a lifetime.

My opponent—a lady—bets with me to my last chip. I—chivalrously—call her. She shows a miserable pair of deuces, a pair of treys and a one-eyed jack. She calls this mess "five of a kind," winning the pot! I weep copiously and plaintively, but to no avail. Table rules decree that this hodgepodge wins over the marvelous, natural royal straight—a hand one dreams of but seldom—well hardly ever—holds. Ye Gods! Yours for saner but surer poker.

FRANK DAVIS.

Simplifying Things

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Is it true what they say about the Nazis? After reading Corley McDarment's naive tribute, I am beginning to wonder. Can it be that we are maligning this simple and wholesole government, which is only working to satisfy "the inherent longing of men to break down the complexities of modern life?" We have Mr. McDarment's word for it that "the Communists are the only ones who believe in creating international social unrest." I wonder who told him, or is it just pure intuition.

Will someone please tell the difference between our United States farmers and the Nazis in the barter business—or is it just the same thing? "If Naziism means getting back to a simpler way of living—" I suppose it does sort of simplify things when you want someone's property to hit him over the head, take his goods, and then kick him out. Or if someone doesn't agree with you to just get him out of the way. Or to browbeat someone into saying black is white and white is black to save needless argument, and to win one's point. Or has somebody been kidding me and creating a lot of nasty propaganda against the wholesome Nazis? Probably just a dirty Communist trick.

"Slow Men Working"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I notice in a recent issue of The Post that Secretary Ickes objects to "Slow Men Working" signs. The same question came up in Virginia several years ago, so the highway signs were changed to read "Men Working Slow." The realignment of the words brought forth even more laughter from motorists and the signs were made to read "Men Working."

If there is any special reason why motorists should be informed of the speed being carried on on these projects, why not paint the signs to read "WPA Men Working"?

The Poet

GEORGE SAT on the back row with a girl from the school. The room was filled with girls in evening dresses, with gray-haired ladies in velvet wraps and with men of all ages. The lights in the room were subdued and, assisted by a fire of logs in a huge stone fireplace, drew the room into a warm, comfortable attitude. Over the room hung an expectant air, an air of waiting, so that George was enjoyed to catch a feeling of community adulation only gently restrained.

This, he saw further, was the girl's attitude, was the attitude of all the girls in the school. For the school, you see, was giving that night what years ago was called a soiree, an entertainment that today in its infrequency lacks a name.

At last the shifting of portable chairs ceased and the hum of conversation reduced itself to a buzz of whispering. The girl touched George's arm. "Here he comes!" she said softly.

* * *

The poet came down the center aisle, a man with white hair who wore a dinner jacket. George watched him with the others. He carried two books in his hand, one large, one very small, and while being introduced he stood with a half-amused expression on his features as if this were a very old story to him. Then amid the applause that followed his introduction he moved under a bright light to the speaker's stand and laid his two books on it.

He began to talk quietly, in a low voice touched with age. His voice, and his face under that one bright light, told George he was older than he had appeared coming down the aisle. In his quiet way, extemporaneously, he told his audience how much he liked Washington, of the discoveries—little things that pleased him—he was making on his visit, of Washington's constant and growing importance to the country as a whole. Then he touched his books and said:

"I've been asked to read some of my poems to you. Someone very kindly made out a list for me of the poems I am to read. And I've lost the list. So I'll just read the ones I want to." He held up the larger of the books. "There are 45 years of poetry in this book," he said.

* * *

Before the reading of each poem he gave a brief explanation of it, a few words punctuated with dry, gentle wit. "Now this one is about a fork in a road, a New England road, and it has nothing to do with Hitler or Mussolini, Fascism or Communism. It's just about one road that becomes two roads."

The first poems he read were poems written when he was young. They were about the seasons and the countryside, the same subjects poets have sung about since the beginning of time. Sometimes there were people in them, the people a man would think of who loved his family, his grandchildren, who after a long life still loved the countryside where he was born. In the later poems he read, George saw the influence of a moving world, of knowledge and people and places all alien to a boy on a New England farm years ago. There was even one about a movie star. And yet these poems somehow still carried over the ineffable feeling of those other ones, the feeling that saw and made a poem of trees bowed down with ice, of an old man alone at night, of all the simple things poets have sung about since the beginning of time.

It was not until the poet had closed his books that George realized he had been reading and talking as if the one interest in the world of his audience were poetry. George wondered if perhaps this might not account, at least in part, for the complete attention he had received. At all events, the poet went back down the aisle, apparently pleased with the applause accorded him. At once, conversation broke out and the shuffling of portable chairs began again. A surge was made in the direction of the poet.

"Would you like to meet him?" the girl asked George. "Or would you rather go downstairs for coffee and cakes?"

They went downstairs and sat in front of a fire. The adulation, the oral fawning, the hero worship were too much for George. He considered this. Here was a man who wrote, because he wanted to, of the things that caught his interest, in the way he liked best. Here was an American with whom one would surely find it pleasant to talk. Whether or not he was "great" did not enter into it. Time alone could prove that point.

When they had drunk their coffee and most of the guests at the soiree had gone, George turned to the girl.

"If you don't mind," he said, "I believe I'll take you up. I mean about meeting him."

The girl smiled. "Of course," she said. Together they rose and went up the stairs to speak to Robert Frost.

Reveler's Lament

WHAT A JOY, indeed, is his who can bound from his bed alert and vibrant with healthy vigor for the glad new year, a smile on his lips, a song in his heart, his spirit as clean as a running brook.

The clear, cold air blows briskly through the open window, but he has renewed his vitality with eight full hours of untroubled sleep, and the saucy blasts merely tingle his skin, which glows with the warm strength of physical well-being.

"One-two, one-two, one-two, up-down, up-down, up-down," 50 times for a breather, and now, placing the hands lightly on the hips and holding the ears at right angles, he bends from the waist, right-left, three-four, and after 100 times bounds into an icy shower, singing, a little off-key, perhaps, but with sheer delight at being alive this beautiful morn. He faces another year equipped in soul and body for his duty as a citizen, a credit to his parents and his employer and an asset to the world.

NOT FOR HIM the sad follies of those who sit far into the night in sinful reveling, drinking intoxicating beverages which numb the spirit and the senses and corrode the human soul. Not for him the suggestive dancing of those who are erroneously considered "smart" to the strains of sensuous music calculated to stimulate evil thoughts of womanhood. Not for him the society of poor, misguided and silly feminine companions in immodest attire, with cheeks and lips artificially colored to counterfeit the glow of health which cannot reside in those who imbibe poisonous draughts and wantonly impair with tobacco fumes the magnificent edifice provided by nature as the mansion of the human soul.

Not for him the late hours and ill-advised diet of those who, having greeted the new year at midnight, then continue their mocking behavior until 1 o'clock or even as late as 2 or 4, consuming sausage and scrambled eggs contrary to the simplest rules of hygiene and awake at noon on New Year's Day feeling physically and spiritually depressed and knowing in their hearts that they have misused an occasion for fine resolutions to occupy themselves with shameful behavior.

THEIR PAINS, their ill-at-ease tossing amid the covers, as they stir on New Year's Day are pitiful in the extreme; but much worse, as one would see if one could but peer into their souls, is the sense of remorse, of self-reproach for having wantonly and willfully rejected an occasion which instinctively calls men to repentance and reform. They are entered on the new year steeped in their follies and vices, and the future lowers when, but for their flabby yielding to temptation, it would have dawned bright as the sun in the heavens.

Pretend, they may, to be content with their way and at peace in their hearts, but they are only little boys and girls grown up, and they cannot altogether stifle the feeble chiding of the small, still voice within them.

NO SWEET and innocent sleep has been their lot since at last they ceased their wicked revelry with the coming of the dawn, but rather stupor and troubled tossing as soul and body rebelled together. No joy is theirs, but woe and inner shame, as feebly they open their eyes and quickly shut them again to exclude the beautiful light of the flaming beacon of a new year, a new chance, and immerse themselves another hour in the murk of unworthiness. No thrilling health and strength is theirs to bring them bounding to the open window to fill their lungs with nature's own wine, the crisp, sweet air of morning, flavored with optimism of the new year. No song of virtue wells up from their hearts, no glad brotherly greetings to their fellow men are framed by their parched and crusted lips. No zest have they for the fray of life, no simple pride and pleasure in having lived up to the best that is in them.

nation, and in an offer by strengthened House and Senate minorities to co-operate with Democrats for reduction of spending.

Reception of the Sheppard committee report condemning WPA political activities in several States was the only new business transacted in a 30-minute Senate session devoted to the swearing of new Senators and routine resolutions.

In little groups of four, Vice President Garner, "the man to see" in the new Congressional Democratic move to the right, received the new Senators and administered their oath to support the Constitution "against all enemies, foreign and domestic."

With rosters complete on the Senate's first roll call, Garner cracked the gavel signaling the Senate's first adjournment, and Senators retired to lobbies and offices to air their views on the session to colleagues and reporters.

G. O. P. Re-elects McNary

Earlier, Senate Republicans in their first party conference re-elected Senator McNary, of Oregon, Republican leader, and Senator Hale, of Maine, secretary of the Republican conference.

McNary said Republicans did not discuss legislation but will "wait and see what the President has to say in his message to Congress tomorrow."

He said it was "the unbroken voice of the conference" to co-operate with any group to reduce Government expenditures where that can be done "without injury to those in distress."

Representative Martin (Republican), of Massachusetts, new House minority leader, previously voiced a similar offer of co-operation. Revived talk of a right wing coalition spread through the Capitol.

But it was apparent that bushy-browed Vice President Garner, who returned to Washington a fortnight in advance of the session to urge the Administration to heed the elections and steer a cautious course, was not courting a Republican coalition.

Assuming the role of the Administration's "front man" at the Capitol, he was reportedly still seeking a truce in his party's own ranks that would permit Democrats to work out a harmonious solution of their legislative differences in this session's prelude to 1940.

Chairman Smith (Democrat), South Carolina, of the Senate Agriculture Committee, victorious over an Administration election purge effort, declared for revision of the farm act—a project Garner is said to favor and Wallace to oppose.

Senator Bridges (Republican), of New Hampshire, predicted defeat of the President's nomination of Donald Wakefield Smith to another term on the Labor Relations Board at the Capitol again heard that the President has been urged to withdraw the appointment.

Wagner Maintains Silence

Demands of Senator Burke (Democrat), of Nebraska, and others for modification of the Wagner labor relations act encountered silence from Senator Wagner (Democrat), of New York, whose name the law bears. Wagner also declined comment on the Smith appointment.

Swift developments on the WPA and relief front were anticipated in days just ahead as the Sheppard report struck a keynote for (1) opposition to a heavy relief deficiency appropriation, (2) close committee scrutiny of the nomination of Hopkins to be Secretary of Commerce, and (3) an effort to work out a formula for distribution of future relief funds under closer Congressional check.

It was learned the Budget Bureau is considering submitting the relief budget as part of a $1,000,000,000 general deficiency bill, with the WPA deficiency item running much lower.

From Senator Lewis (Democrat), of Illinois, Senate majority whip, came a forecast that the Administration will decide to transfer many WPA activities to the PWA.

The President's message today meantime was expected to put an end to speculation on his course on domestic policy and to strike a ringing note for American preparedness on the international front.

Bankhead, now serving his third successive term as chief officer of the lower house, pledged himself to fairness to the minority and asserted that members on both sides of the House "can well afford to consecrate their brain and heart and energy to those things that best serve the safety and security" of the Nation "and guarantee the perpetuity of our republican form of government."

The Speaker gave warm praise to Bertrand H. Snell, of New York, former minority leader, who retired at the close of the last session of Congress.

Rules Proportion the Same

As if to emphasize the harmony, a Democratic proposal that the Rules Committee retain its former size of 14 members and the 39-man Appropriations Committee be enlarged to 40 was accepted without objection.

Some Republican leaders had hoped for a 12-man Rules Committee, to consist of eight Democrats and four Republicans. However, the old proportion of ten to four will be retained despite doubled Republican membership in the House. On the other hand, the makeup of the Appropriations Committee probably will be revised from the present proportion of 28-11 to 25-15.

Following the roll call, Representative McCormack, permanent secretary of the Democratic caucus, nominated Senator Bankhead for Speaker, terming him "that wise, eloquent, sincere, distinguished gentleman from Alabama." Representative Woodruff, of Michigan, secretary of the Republican conference, nominated Martin without eulogy.

In addition to the 418 votes for Bankhead and Martin, Progressive Representatives Hull and Gehrman, of Wisconsin, voted for each other. The lone Farmer-Laborite, Representative Buckler, of Minnesota, cast his ballot for Bankhead. Martin voted "present" and Bankhead did not vote.

No Delay for Contests

In the House, contrary to expectation, no member was asked to stand aside without taking the oath because of election contests.

The veteran chaplain of the House, Dr. James Shera Montgomery, was re-elected unanimously. Democrats and Republicans each went through the formality of naming their candidates for the various House offices; clerk, sergeant at arms, doorkeeper and postmaster. The Democrats won handily, in each case re-electing the incumbent.

Appointment of Representative Barden (Democrat), North Carolina, to succeed former Representative Driver, of Arkansas, on the TVA investigating committee was announced, as was the resignation of former Representative Eicher, of Iowa, from the "monopoly" committee.

The session ended at 2:33 p. m. with only a fraction of the membership on the floor after resolutions had been adopted regretting the deaths of Senator Copeland of New York, and Representatives Boylan of New York, Gambrill of Maryland, Bacon of New York and Gasque of South Carolina.

'We Come First,' Britain's Jobless Tell Chamberlain

London, Jan. 3.—Prime Minister Chamberlain, instead of going to Rome next week to appease Premier Mussolini, was advised today to stay at home and appease Britain's army of unemployed, who are barely existing on a scanty dole.

The advice was extended by a group of unemployed, who staged a novel demonstration in front of No. 10 Downing street, where they attempted to deliver a black coffin inscribed: "Unemployed—He Asked in Vain for Appeasement."

Inside the coffin was a rolled umbrella, symbolic of the prime minister. The effort to bury Chamberlain in effigy was defeated by police only after a hearty struggle.

There are now over 1,375,000 unemployed persons in Britain, and London financiers, while passing out optimistic statements for public consumption, are worried as to what will happen when the abnormal armaments spending ceases.

The President: 1939

THE MOST IMPORTANT personality in the United States is still the President. Both by his position and his gift of leadership, he sets the tone and temper of the country.

Today, as Congress opens, it is important to know, or guess, what that tone and temper will be.

The only way of gauging it is from the President's public utterances during the last three months.

From those utterances one must believe that he is bent on achieving a maximum of unity among all groups and classes, that his attitude has become much more cautiously tolerant than it was before the last Congress adjourned, and that he is seeking a rapprochement all along the line—between the two major labor groups, between labor and business, and between business and Government.

This was obvious, I think, in his radio broadcast of October 25 to the Herald Tribune Forum—a speech which was, incidentally, one of the best in his career as President. It ended with the words, "Let us work for greater unity, for peace among the nations of the world, for restraint, for negotiation and for community of effort. Let us work for the same ideas within our own borders in our relations with each other so that we may, if the test ever comes, have that unity . . . of will with which alone a democracy can successfully meet its enemies."

AGAIN, his speech of December 5 at Chapel Hill, N. C., advocated a middle-of-road policy.

"It is only the unthinking liberals in this world who see nothing but tragedy in the slowing up or temporary stopping of liberal progress.

"It is only the unthinking conservatives who rejoice when a social or economic reform fails to be 100 per cent successful."

And denying that he breakfasted on "grilled millionaire," he said: "Actually, I am an exceedingly mild-mannered person . . . a practitioner of peace, both domestic and foreign, a believer in the capitalistic system."

He advocated tolerance and a national point of view, ending with the words: "Whatever convictions I have, none is stronger than my abiding belief that the security and well being of the American people can best be served by the democratic processes which have made this country strong and great."

And he predicted that what America does today will have "a greater bearing and influence upon the history of the human race for centuries to come than most of us can conceive."

NOW IF ONE seeks the reasons for the change in the President's tone from that of the knight in shining armor in the lists against "the forces of greed and privilege," from the warrior proclaiming that "for all these things we have just begun to fight," one will not, I think, find the answer in the election returns, although they no doubt gave the extremists pause.

But the real answer is to be found in what happened at Munich. For at Munich the democratic world suffered a most disastrous defeat, and however dressed up that defeat may have been by the British and French governments, the President of the United States and the people of the United States saw it entirely for what it was—a most ignominious capitulation.

And the President of the United States knows that if at this moment there is to be any democratic leadership in the world, that leadership must come from the United States.

HE KNOWS, TOO, that the weakness of the European democratic governments has arisen from their failure to grasp the outstanding reality of the world in which they live; to impose upon themselves sufficient discipline; to see to their defense, and recede from their belief that they can have everything at once. Certainly the President has drawn some conclusions from the experience of France, where the conflict between the Right and Left and the demands of the Left, regardless of how justified under normal conditions, put the country's finances in an even worse than usual state, diminished production and trade and slowed down disastrously the armament program.

The two great European democracies presented a lamentable spectacle, at Munich, and the President is both too realistic and too politically gifted not to have noticed it.

THERE ALSO ARE indications that he had seen for some time the probability that by 1938 or 1939 the attention of this country would be bound to direct itself outward and that his speed in pushing social and reform legislation was due to his desire to get the most urgent matters settled quickly, so that in a time of international crisis we could rest on them.

They have been settled so quickly that many of them have been settled badly and will have to be reformed in the course of time.

But such things as the legal status of organized labor, unemployment insurance and old-age pensions, the responsibility of Government to aid the destitute, the necessity for some Government control over the stock market and of action to stabilize agriculture have become accepted by the public mind as legitimate functions of Government, and the fundamental fight about them is over, although there will continue to be radical differences of opinion as to specific programs and methods.

The President sees that the menace to democracy at this moment does not come from inside this country but from outside it.

He has, more than most Presidents who have sat in the White House, a real world sense. Neither he nor his Secretary of State believes that the United States can maintain liberal democracy uniquely on this planet.

He knows that we shall have to fight for it—that we will not maintain it by continual concessions along all fronts euphemistically called "appeasement," nor does he think—I should guess from his words and from his actions—that the way to avoid armed conflict is continually to retreat.

HISTORY SHOWS that any great nation will take a stand in the last ditch, even if the stand involves war. But the last ditch is precisely the place where the aggressors will be most bellicose, for before that they will have already captured all the important strategical positions.

In modern twentieth-century warfare these positions are not captured by arms but by the threat of them; they are taken by diplomacy, propaganda and by trade policies.

But the people of the United States need to keep cool heads on their shoulders during this next period. We need unity, self-discipline, arms and leadership.

But we should watch and consider very closely all the programs for achieving these admirable things.

And we should constantly remember that we want them because we want to preserve freedom for ourselves and our posterity.

An enemy is a very dangerous fellow from two points of view. He may do disastrous things to us, but he may also persuade us to do disastrous things to ourselves. We do not want to turn ourselves into a herd state in order to be prepared to deal with other herd states.

The Once Over

Auction Trend

Auctions are getting to cover too much territory. Once upon a time when you saw an auction flag you could assume somebody was selling jewelry, rugs, paintings or horses. Now it may be suspension bridges, transportation systems, a Federal building.

Not long ago a postoffice was sold to the highest bidder. Then the Tombs, New York's old prison, was advertised for sale. The other day an elevated railroad was auctioned off. Things have reached a point where an auction addict can't be interested in anything that can be conveniently handled any more.

"I just picked up the loveliest suspension bridge," you hear an auction fan boast.

"Really!" exclaims her companion.

"Yes. I really didn't need it, but it was priced so low and my first bid took it."

"I know how it is," says the companion. "Last week I went to an auction and before I knew it I had a car barn, a viaduct and a drawbridge."

"I'm always picking something up," says the first lady. "Did you hear about the municipal 18-hole golf course I got?"

"No. Was it a bargain?"

"Well, I think so. I didn't need the whole course. All I wanted was a water hole and part of a locker room, but at the price I did well, I think. I'm giving what I don't need to some of my friends. If you want a hole or two just say so."

"Are there any good sales coming this week?"

"Yes. New York City advertises the sale of some old snowplows, two city supply stations, a ferryboat and a tunnel. It looks like a grand chance."

"I've always wanted an old snowplow."

"They're so hard to get, you know. Personally, what I am after is a fireboat, but nobody seems to be selling one this season."

"A friend of mine picked up a very fine specimen of garbage scow last month."

"What did she want it for?"

"She didn't want it, but you know how it is when you get to an auction. You just can't resist making a bid."

"Well, it's great fun, anyhow. Do you know what I am looking for at auction?"

"No."

"A set of early American police stations!"

(If she doesn't lose interest she'll get it.—Ed.)

The monopoly probe has brought out the fact that there is a glass manufacturing combination which makes a lot of money. But the stockholders probably get depressed, just the same, whenever they see a quart of milk in a paper container.

Ends And Means

"Evil remains evil . . . the accomplished horror remains accomplished; and that the suffering and despair of men; a single tear, a single cry torn from the heart by injustice—there can indeed be a recompense for these things (for that cause Jesus died), but they cannot be effaced, they will never be effaced, no, never in all the world again.

"We forget that it is these errors and faults, these lies, these cruelties, these blindnesses, all this machinery of the "realists" of sinful means brought into action for good ends (to which we resign ourselves with that grain of satisfaction which a superior mind finds in the sense of its own superiority), it is these things which principally and primarily have brought Christendom to the state in which it is today, have brought about that universal misfortune of which civilization today shows us the picture.

"Christendom will re-create itself by Christian means, or it will come to its complete undoing."

Books and Things

By Isabel Paterson

Venezuela

THE WELL-TO-DO Venezuelans, says Erna Fergusson in her new book, "Venezuela" (Knopf, $3), "are really more at home in Paris, London or New York than in Caracas," their own capital. "Of Venezuela they know nothing," outside their own class; they have even been cut off, by dictatorship, from exercising a genuine political or social function as an aristocracy. They are oriented East and West, as North Americans are. Consequently Venezuela is a land of enormous contrasts internally and it seems very far away from the United States. Miss Fergusson's book cannot accomplish the feat of bringing it closer immediately; no one book could.

The volume is mixed reporting, of country, people and ideas. Naturally there is not space in less than 350 pages to be at once comprehensive and profound; but a vivid external impression is given, stimulating to curiosity nonetheless because it is sometimes superficial and contradictory. This is not the mere contradiction inherent in the history and physical conditions of the country, but the occasional naivete of the reporter.

VENEZUELA WAS freed from Spanish rule by the great liberator, Simon Bolivar; Miss Fergusson properly gives him a chapter. Of course he could not do much more than effect territorial independence; his general idea seems to have been that of an aristocratic republic approximating the early Roman model in that it was to have a hereditary Senate, but like enough to a constitutional monarchy in calling for a life-term Presidency and "a strongly centralized government." With these he "insisted upon the importance of universal education, an incorruptible judiciary and civil liberty." The terms became rather vague in such a connotation. However, he succeeded in his first objective, independence; and he left a name which still supplies emotional content to the word liberty. Miss Fergusson's statement: "He was a democrat, as only a true aristocrat can be," is a meaningless cliche which he doesn't seem to have deserved. He could easily have made himself an absolute dictator, and did not. But with the same general setting, Juan Vicente Gomez did. This is the drawback to the romantic political hero. A single liberator as an ideal is reversible into a single tyrant.

Gomez died so recently that his shadow still darkens the outlook of Venezuela. And a fresh confusion has been imported with the word Communist. Miss Fergusson is rationally excused from attempting to define what a Venezuelan Communist may be or believe, or from affirming or denying that there are any authentic Communists in the country. Inevitably a few persons have been exiled as such. But Miss Fergusson cites as already adopted in law or at least "contemplated" such measures as "houses supplied by large employers for labor" and state expropriation of land to be divided into 2½-acre farms which are allotted to married men with children. The land is a man's as long as he works it. Children may inherit, but unworked land reverts to the state."

Miss Fergusson quotes these as "in line with the best modern thought," along with an eight-hour labor law, as if both were deduced from the same principles. "Industry, thrift and good farming, these the government hopes to develop in their human specimens by education, oversight and wise direction."

AND YET, ELSEWHERE, Miss Fergusson records that, after Gomez, "it may be that this tragic mistrust has developed a pervasive lack of self-confidence and a general feeling of futility . . . Accustomed to passive obedience or unexpressed resentment, they wait, however doubtfully, on government action. They cannot believe that they, personally and of their own power, might clean up and beautify a town, combat disease and filth, found schools that would teach and go on teaching; that their people might come to maturity. Those not in office cannot visualize government as a friend of the people and not their enemy."

Very strange, when they have had Gomez. Or can it be that they realize a fact which Miss Fergusson overlooks—that Gomez was the government and the government was Gomez. It really would not have made any difference if Bolivar had chosen to grasp the same power. Apparently he knew that himself.

Garner, The Adjuster

By Ernest K. Lindley

Callers Prove New Eminence

THE MOST AGREEABLE sounds currently issuing from the conservative bleachers are the dithyrambs to John Nance Garner. He has come up in the world a long way since 1932, when the Republicans accused Franklin D. Roosevelt of muzzling the Texas "wild man" so that he could not shock the American people into re-electing Herbert Hoover. They began to recant a few years ago when he finally did open his mouth, and what came forth proved to be thoroughly in accord with the canons of orthodox society. Now even the Republican New York Herald Tribune pays tribute to "those clear, unblinking blue orbs of the Vice President" and to the "clear-headed statesman from Uvalde."

The new eminence of the Vice President is proven by the long lines of callers—Democrats, Republicans, and New Dealers (including two Cabinet members)—who have besieged his door since his return to Washington on December 17. In the Administration the advice given to a man in perplexity is "See Jack Garner," instead of "See Tom Corcoran," or, as in still earlier days, "See Ray Moley."

THE NEW YORK Herald Tribune seems to regard Mr. Garner as a liquidator of the New Deal. He regards himself as an "adjuster." His return from Uvalde was preceded by an authoritative newspaper article setting forth his eagerness to fight Republicans by reuniting the scattered Democrats in the middle of the road behind a "reasonable program." So the Vice President asked for the job, and he is getting it. The troubles of the New Deal are being loaded onto his shoulders.

The President, at the insistence of his critics, seems to be ready to restrict himself to his constitutional duties as a coach. Jack Garner will soon know, if he doesn't already, what it takes to be a New Deal quarterback. It is well known that he wants to rely more on straight football. The New Dealers argue that as long as it relied on straight football the Democratic party could never gain a yard north of the Mason and Dixon line. Nevertheless, the most ardent New Dealers must acknowledge that their flashy aerial tactics haven't been clicking lately. The problem is to get a balanced set of plays, and whether the substitute quarterback and the coach can agree on what that means is still an unanswerable question.

THE VICE PRESIDENT has already done a few things which are unexpectedly pleasing to the New Dealers. He has embraced Frank Murphy, saluting him as one of the finest men in American public life—thereby refuting the whispered accusation that he inspired the pre-election attack on Mr. Murphy by the Dies committee. Jack Garner is credited in well-informed quarters with influencing the President to appoint Mr. Murphy, instead of Robert H. Jackson, to the Attorney Generalship. Mr. Garner is said to have coupled his indorsement of Mr. Murphy with a warning against putting another New Yorker in the Cabinet. A number of New Dealers suspect that Mr. Garner was aroused to the dangers of a geographic concentration in the Cabinet by James A. Farley, whose big-brotherly attitude toward all New York Democrats cools somewhat whenever any of them begins to look like a potential Presidential candidate. From this springs the renewed talk of a Garner-Farley axis, which some New Dealers fear is aimed, under the slogan of "rectification," at their complete dismemberment.

Why the New Dealers should be a bit skittish as they hover around Adjuster Garner is understandable. Less comprehensible are the misgivings which some of his conservative admirers in Congress are beginning to mutter. They express fear that he is being put on the spot, that if things go wrong in Congress he will be the "goat." Perhaps they fear that he is exposing himself too generously to the beguilements of the New Dealers and that in his earnest quest for unity he will be tempted to yield too much rather than admit defeat.

THESE APPREHENSIVE friends forget that nobody is more expert than John N. Garner in getting rid of a hot potato by the simple method of dropping it. He has in reserve, however, a way of retreat more in consonance with his present statesmanlike activities. In their enthusiasm for the "clear-headed statesman from Uvalde" and his "unblinking blue orbs" the critics of the New Deal seem to have forgotten their duties to the Constitution. This, according to them, was to be a Congress independent of the Executive; the constitutional separation of powers was to be restored. The Vice President's sole constitutional duty is to preside over the Senate and cast his vote when there is a tie. He lacks even the President's legislative powers to recommend and to veto.

So if Mr. Garner finds his trials as adjuster too burdensome he can always unload them by invoking the Constitution against himself.

Head of G-Men At Los Angeles Quits Service

Los Angeles, Jan. 3.—John H. Hanson, 36, who helped solve several spectacular criminal cases, has resigned as head of the Federal Bureau of Investigation office here and from the service.

His chief assistant, Val C. Zimmer, 33, succeeded him today.

Hanson came to Los Angeles in December, 1935, after work in Seattle, Birmingham, Chicago, Washington and New York.

Employers failing to pay the 1938 District unemployment compensation tax by January 31 will lose the 90 per cent credit against the Federal tax on pay rolls, John A. ## Famous Authors Of Early Days Worked for U. S.

The National Archives, constantly unearthing documentary surprises, has placed on exhibition a group of papers showing that some of America's most famous authors once drew pay checks from Uncle Sam.

Or did you know that Bret Harte ("Luck of Roaring Camp," etc.) was our consul in Glasgow, Scotland, a half century ago?

And that Nathaniel Hawthorne ("The Scarlet Letter," etc.) was surveyor of customs in Salem, Mass.?

Even Archivist R. D. W. Connor was surprised to learn that John Burroughs, the naturalist, was a disbursing agent in the Treasury 75 years ago, and John Howard Payne, composer of "Home, Sweet, Home," served as American consul in Tunis for ten years until his death in 1852.

Letters, surety bonds and other papers bearing the signatures of these men of letters who, at one time or another, were in Government service, are on display in the shrine room of the Archives building.

A Woman's New York

By Alice Hughes.

New York, Jan. 3.

AS I HAVE hinted here before, vocal debuts are very common at the Metropolitan Opera this season. Director Edward Johnson ranges the tall and uncut all summer, digging up slim and well-voiced tenors and soprano singers who weigh less than 140. They can also sing, and swell.

ALICE HUGHES

But a couple of Saturdays ago the musty old Met had a deboo as was a deboo—for making her prettiest party bow was one of our very own, the soprano named Rise (Ree-zay, they tell me) Stevens, who was born right here in New York's own Bronx, and who was graduated from our Newtown High School in 1929. And believe you me, a goodly delegation from the Bronnix turned out to see that the crowd did right by their Ree-Zay, as she turned loose her golden notes in the rather piddling lead of "Mignon." A few days later she stood on the same stage with the great Lotte Lehman in a great performance of the glorious "Der Rosenkavalier." Again Ree-Zay did fine. The Home Town Girl was in!

Miss Stevens is a big girl—big of bone and big of voice—and if she keeps going full tilt she seems certain to be a gal in the Flagstad tradition, fit to cope with the mightiest roles of the Wagnerian repertoire. She's no clinging vine for any heroic tenor's manly chest. Ree-Zay will stand right up there at the Met and sing, fit to bust. So that "Mignon" matinee was a wondrous day for the home-town folks of New York, happy to see one of our own girls make very good on that sainted stage so long adorned by so many famous "furriners." Never fear—we raise 'em mighty in the Bronx, too. And the town is like to bust with civic pride.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Hurray, shout the Katharine Hepburn fans! It now appears that the freckled wonder from Hartford will be seen in a new play by Philip Barry, entitled "The Philadelphia Story." Barry, in fact, wrote the piece expressly for Katie, and it will open later in the season.

The world's leading forgotten man just got a break in the New York press. Did you see the pictures of Ernest Simpson and his new wife, the former Mary Kirk Raffray, at a London cocktail binge. Ernest looks very contented and slightly droll, in the picture. Now don't say you don't recall Ernie. He was married to Wally—'member? She's now a countess or something, isn't she?

It's a good thing the local stock of gorgeous mannequins is constantly replenished, for the boys insist on marrying them in great numbers, these days. That is, a couple at a time, of course. For instance, Linda Yale, a lovely creature, was just led to the altar by Samuel Gersten, a young man in the paper business. Another vacancy for another beauty in the model ranks. Step right up, girls! . . .

Proportion Is Chief Goal In Reducing

Stars of Same Height Differ in Figures, but Both Are Held Perfect

By special request Miss Kain's 21-day reducing diet is being reprinted. Please clip and save menus at end of this column.

By Ida Jean Kain.

THE WAY to wind up your reducing with a perfect figure is to fix your measurements along with your weight. Now, there is no standard set of measurements for any given height, and, anyway, that's not the real point. What you want is to have the three pivotal measurements in proportion to each other.

Some of the movie stars of the same height are lovely illustrations of the wide difference in measurements. For example, take Joan Blondell and Carole Lombard . . . they are both 5 feet 4, and there the similarity ends. Joan Blondell's measurements are: Bust, 35 inches; waist, 26 inches; hips, 37 inches.

Compare her figure with Miss Lombard's: Bust, 34 inches; waist, 24½ inches, and hips, 35 inches. Since these different sets of measurements both add up to perfect, the explanation is that Miss Blondell has a fairly large frame and Miss Lombard's frame is slight.

Proportions Nearly the Same

But, although the measurements themselves are different, you will notice that in the two figures the proportions are very nearly the same, and either set is something to aim at! When you succeed in bringing your weight to wthin 10 per cent of normal and can boast an 8-inch difference between the bust and waist, with only 2 inches difference between the bust and hips, your figure will also be beautifully proportioned.

Those proportions are the epitome of symmetry and you cannot expect to achieve them on the strength of your diet. On the contrary, weight and symmetry are not very closely connected. You might be considerably above the weight you are entitled to, and have proportions that were fairly good. In your case, the addition of general exercise to the diet should give you a lovely figure.

Add the salt to the egg yolk, blend thoroughly. Add the lemon juice. Then add the oil in quantities of a tablespoon or more, being sure that all the oil has completely combined with the egg yolks before more is added. Continue beating all the time with rotary beater. Toward the last larger quantities of the oil may be added at a time. Have all ingredients cold. If a more acid dressing is desired, add more lemon juice or add the juices from sweet pickles.

Use purified mineral oil—heavy oil is best. This oil has no nutritive value and is also laxative.

Posy Print for Midwinter

Piquant and precise as the first blades of spring grass is this midwinter print ensemble, created by Charles Armour, American designer. Conscious of current ennui over black winter frocks and also mindful of limited budgets he has designed this neat suit for immediate and spring-into-summer wear later. He has cut a brief bright jacket in sheerest wool and has embraced the model's tiny waist in a new prophetic line. The frock beneath is pleated and tucked about the skirt and is done in a tender new floral design.

Youth of 16 Charges This Department With Overlooking the Problems of His Generation

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I read your column and find it quite interesting. A good deal of the time, however, it seems to me that you select people who have love problems. I am a 16-year-old boy and I have a lot of problems and I think a good many of my friends have problems, too. Don't you get any letters from boys and girls my age? If I saw you printing problems and answering them from some of those who are my age, I think I might be tempted to write you. As it is, I wonder if people are interested in problems of my age.

I believe our problems are as great as those love problems and marriage problems. Youth is supposed to be a very happy time and I admit I am not anxious to be old, but if you don't think youth has its problems, you might learn a lot by asking. Probably youth is bashful in talking about its problems, but I would like to see some of our problems in your column. That is, if you are not too old to understand them. WONDERER.

DEAR WONDERER: If you are a faithful follower of this column, you must know that I do get—and publish—mail from teen-age boys and girls, although not, of course, in the same proportion that I receive it from persons ranging in ages from 20 to 50 years of age, let us say. Yet this is not strange, when you consider the population trend in the Nation's Capital, which is definitely toward the adult side. Washington, indeed, has been found by population statisticians to possess the highest percentage of adult population of any municipality in the Nation.

According to a "Study of Fiscal Relations Between the United States and the District of Columbia," Congressionally authorized in 1936 and issued in 1937, "there are fewer children in the District of Columbia, in proportion to middle-aged persons, than in other municipalities studied." On the other hand, ". . . the ratio of old to middle-aged individuals gives a different picture. There are as many old people in Washington in proportion (to middle-aged persons) as . . . in the other 17 cities (studied)."

In "summarizing data," the report submits that Washington, D. C., "is low in numbers of children and average in numbers of old people . . . The average group of 14 to 24 years includes a much smaller percentage . . . than (is) the average of other cities." In addition to these explicitly stated findings, the study includes graphs or charts to show that the entire Northeastern part of the United States is preponderantly populated by adults, with this trend reaching its highest peak in Washington. As a friend of mine puts it: "All the Northeastern part of the United States is adult, and Washington is adultest among the adult."

Now, despite the fact that mathematics and I have always been cold-eyed strangers, so much so that I strive to avoid, insofar as possible, even the simplest exercise in fractions, I am going to try to draw some comparison between these population figures and the amount of mail I publish from this newspaper's teen-age audience. Looking back over the 110 columns which immediately preceded this one, I find that 20 in all (or just slightly less than 20 per cent) were given over to discussions of problems posed by boys and girls ranging in ages from 13 to 19 years of age. (Incidentally, I note, too, that with the youngsters as with their elders, disappointment in love seems to be the topic of major preoccupation, since 14 of the 20 letters had to do with problems of the heart.

But to return to the main theme. In a city principally populated by adults (evenly divided as to middle and older-age groups), where the teen-age group constitutes a nationally noteworthy minority as compared to the norm in such matters, it would seem that a problem columnist was playing fairly by all concerned in conceding the adolescents approximately 20 per cent representation and consideration in his by-and-large output. Unless such a columnist were directing his efforts primarily at a youthful audience, instead of (as in this columnist's case) taking the mail more or less as it comes, it would seem natural and inevitable that a cross-section analysis of all mail received would reveal adult correspondents outnumbering adolescents in just about the ratio indicated.

However, all this is not to say that I am opposed to giving more consideration, more time and space, to the problems of youth. As implied in the preceding paragraph, the contents of this column are dictated more by public pressure than by columnist preference. In other words, letters for publication are chosen primarily with reference to their appeal or applicability to the greatest number of readers, as indicated by the mail itself. As you may have noticed, different types of problems have a way of presenting themselves consecutively in droves and holding the spotlight for periods varying from a week to a fortnight to a month.

Last winter, for instance, the question of how much social freedom of action an 18-year-old girl should be given by her parents was discussed for several weeks, the discussion finally culminating in a full-page presentation of letters from youth on the subject. Again, a problem peculiar to mature persons, as, for instance, the recent pro-and-con discussion of the ethical solution of emotional frustration in marriage, may take the stage for an equal length of time. It is not this columnist who precipitates or prolongs such discussions. It is, rather, a matter of yielding to a manifestation of public interest in a question which obviously affects the lives of many readers.

So—if youth has problems to present, which it has been bashfully withholding for supposed lack of encouragement from this writer, it needs only to come forth with its questions, and they will be answered in due time and rotation. Whether or not I am "too old to understand them" remains, of course, to be proven. Youth, I should say, will have to decide that for itself—after trying out such suggestions as may be forthcoming. M. H.

Sweet Potatoes Make a Fine Pie

Sweet potatoes can be used as pumpkin for a pie, but more milk must be added to give them pumpkin pie consistency. A little less sugar is used and some prefer to substitute ginger for at least a part of the cinnamon and allspice in the usual recipe. One sweet potato pie uses sherry in its flavoring. As a vegetable sweet potatoes are good served in combination with cured meats, ham and bacon, or with roast pork. They make excellent scalloped dishes combined with certain fruits, such as quince, grapefruit, orange or cranberries. For a bit of "dessert" during the dinner course there is the old favorite of candied sweet potatoes done on skewers. These come to the table all a-glisten under their brown sugar and butter crust. Sweet potato, celery pepper-dish is new to our kitchen this fall. Serve sweet potato and pecan croquettes as a change from sweet potatoes plain baked or boiled.

President and Mrs. Roosevelt Hosts To Diplomats of 51 Countries

By Hope Ridings Miller.

Representatives of 51 foreign countries were guests of President and Mrs. Roosevelt last evening at the annual diplomatic dinner at the White House. Since the Dean of the Diplomatic Corps, Sir Ronald Lindsay, is still away, the ranking guest last evening was the Ambassador of Peru, Don Manuel de Freyre y Santander.

HOPE R. MILLER.

China was the only important country not represented at the dinner. Dr. Hu Shih, Chinese Ambassador, is still under medical treatment in New York. The new Japanese Ambassador, Kensuke Horinouchi, was there, however, he and his wife attending a White House party for the first time.

Another new envoy who made his "debut" at the dinner last evening was the minister of the Netherlands, Alexander Loudon, who was accompanied by Mme. Loudon.

The horseshoe table at which the company sat was decorated with red roses, stevia and maidenhair fern. Following the dinner several hundred additional guests arrived for the program that took place in the East Room. Mischa Elman, violinist; Helen Jepson, soprano; and La Trianita, Spanish dancer, were the featured artists of the evening.

In addition to chiefs of missions and their wives, the dinner guests included the chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, Senator Key Pittman, and Mrs. Pittman; the Undersecretary of State and Mrs. Sumner Welles, and the President's mother, Mrs. James Roosevelt, sr.

Irimescu, the Minister of Paraguay, Gen Jose Felix Estigarribia, the Minister of Ireland and Mrs. Brennan, the Minister of Egypt and Mme. Hassan and the Minister of the Netherlands and Mme. Loudon.

Several 'Charges' Among the Guests

Still others there were the Charge d'Affaires of the Soviet Union and Mme Oumansky; the Charge d'Affaires of Italy and Signora Cosmell, the Charge d'Affaires of Mexico and Senora de Quintanilla, the Charge d'Affaires of Cuba and Senora de Baron, the Charge d'Affaires of Germany, Dr. Hans Thomsen; the Charge d'Affaires of Colombia and Senora de Samper Ortega, the British Charge d'Affaires and Mme. La Trianita, who has danced in Washington before and is quite a favorite, is appearing through this week and next at the Shoreham Hotel.

Returns to Studies

Blooms Greet Friends at Tea

Representative and Mrs. Sol Bloom, whose Tuesdays "at home" have become a Capital institution, entertained at their first of the season yesterday afternoon at their residence on Columbia road.

Unlike most parties of this kind, which are usually packed and jammed, the Bloom's tea was small and cozy, so that everyone could sit down and chat peacefully. The Bloom household has always been famous for its delicious food, and yesterday some of the delicacies included thin sandwiches of watercress and marmalade; tiny pattie shells filled with hot mushrooms, and little fresh strawberries on a nest of whipped cream.

Mrs. Bloom poured tea from her usual seat on the sofa in front of the fireplace, and her daughter, Miss Vera Bloom, wearing a red wool frock with a pleated skirt—assisted her.

Representative Bloom spent a large part of the afternoon deep in conservation with Rear Admiral Mark Bristol and Thomas Burke. Mrs. Bristol, who is one of the most beloved women in Capital society, wore a short black fur wrap over her dress and a hat trimmed with blue feathers.

Miss Florence Harris, in a stunning cross fox crepe, entertained Michal Budny, of the Polish Embassy. Her mother, Mrs. Russell Bennett, was also present, in black. Lady Marler was accompanied by the Commercial Counselor of the Canadian Legation and Mrs. Merchant Mahoney. Another present from diplomatic ranks was Mme. Fotitch, wife of the Yugoslav Minister, who wore a becoming rose-colored suit and hat to match.

Clarence Hewes, Mrs. Dorothy Lee Ward and her niece, Miss Florence Cauthen, and Ralph Snowden Hill were others present at this very pleasant little party.

Lucile Sheppard Feted at Luncheon By Patton Twins

Miss Lucile Sheppard, debutante daughter of Senator and Mrs. Morris Sheppard, who has been honored at a round of parties during her holiday from Wellesley College, was feted yesterday at a luncheon given by the Misses Helen Mitchell and Virginia Mitchell Patton, twin daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond S. Patton. The party took place in the Louis Seize room at the Shoreham.

Joan King Returns To Sweet Briar

Miss Joan King, debutante daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. Walter King, has returned to her studies at Sweet Briar College after enjoying a round of parties here through the recent holidays.

One of the last functions arranged in her honor was a dinner given by Mr. and Mrs. Carl F. Ankener on New Year's evening. The long table at which the guests sat was centered with a bouquet of red snapdragons, flanked by tall red candles.

About The Town

With Dudley Harmon

OUR TOWN already seems much more crowded and lively now that Congress has convened. Everywhere one sees cars with "75th Congress" license plates, shiny limousines with chauffeurs at the wheel, or humbler models spattered with mud from transcontinental journeys.

DUDLEY HARMON.

Notes on the opening yesterday:

Society as usual snubbed the House for the Senate galleries, although both were jammed. One of the most chic of the spectators was Mrs. William Bankhead, wife of the House Speaker, who wore a mink coat over a lighter brown dress, brown accessories to match her frock, and a cinnamon colored turban.

The Roosevelts were absent yesterday, but will occupy the President's gallery this morning, when the Chief Executive delivers his message to both Houses. With her usual consideration, the First Lady sent word that their vacant places should be given to any Senators or Representatives who needed extra tickets. Two went to Representative Bruce Barton, another two to Representative Will Rogers, and still another pair to Representative A. J. Sabath, dean of the House, who had with him Mayor Kelly of Chicago.

REPRESENTATIVE EDITH NOURSE ROGERS wore a double-blossom orchid yesterday, which is not news, as she always pins a flower to her frock. But it was news when Senator Hattie Caraway blossomed out in flowers, a pair of red roses fastened to her dress in the old-fashioned way, stems up. Mrs. Rogers orchids were outshone by those of Representative Mary T. Norton and Representative Caroline O'Day was another who succumbed on this one occasion to the lure of a corsage.

Widely publicized as refusing to buy any new clothes for her career in the House, the only new woman member of Congress, Representative Jessie Sumner, of Illinois, nevertheless looked very trim yesterday in a black silk dress with a white vestee. She has reddish hair which is graying slightly.

Former Secretary of Commerce Daniel C. Roper was glimpsed among the throng. Almost 30 years ago he served as clerk for the House Ways and Means Committee.

The person who stole the show even from legislators yesterday was young Gene Cox, daughter of Representative E. E. Cox, of Georgia. She served as page just for a day—the first time that a young lady has ever acted in this capacity in Congress. She wore a dark blue skirt, plaid jacket, and yellow bow in her hair.

OFFICIAL MOURNING for diplomats extends not only to everyday clothes, but even to such costumes as iceskating ensembles. Mme. Munthe de Morgenstierne, attractive Canadian wife of the Norwegian Minister, has a lovely bright colored Norwegian costume for the rink, but has to do her skating instead in a black sweater, skirt and beret. Her legation is in six-months mourning for the late Queen Maude of Norway.

THE FEATURE of the debut of Lucile Sheppard, which the papers back home in Texas played up, was the fact that no cocktails were served! Senator Sheppard is an ardent dry.

Another home where liquor is never served is that of Mr. and Mrs. Huston Thompson. At the residence of Canon and Mrs. Anson Phelps Stokes one also finds no cocktails. The many friends of the latter, incidentally, will be sorry to learn that when the Canon retires from the Cathedral next spring, he and Mrs. Stokes will live all the year round at their summer residence in Stockbridge, Mass.

All the Junior Leaguers are corralling their boy friends for the "casting party" to be held tonight at the Shoreham. The talents of the guests will be up for review, and those who win out will be awarded parts in the Junior Follies scheduled for next month.

Jenkins, of Ironton, also re-elected, was unable to attend.

An optimistic spirit, despite the difficulties of our times, was urged by Bishop James E. Freeman, of the National Cathedral, in an address yesterday morning to the members of the Diocesan Woman's Auxiliary. The spirit of Christ, exemplified in daily living, has power to surmount every obstacle, he declared.

Bishop Freeman spoke at the Communion service held in St. Thomas' Episcopal Church preceding the annual luncheon and meeting of the auxiliary in the parish hall. Miss Mary Louise Pardee, president of the Woman's Auxiliary of the Diocese of Connecticut, and, until recently, chairman of the national executive board, spoke at the afternoon meeting.

More than 300 women attended the gathering, which included representatives of all of the Episcopal churches in the District of Columbia, in Montgomery, Prince Georges and St. Marys counties.

Mrs. A. Guy Reber Heads Auxiliary

Mrs. A. Guy Reber, who is completing the first year of her three-year term as president of the auxiliary, presided at the business meeting, which was opened with prayer by the Rev. Dr. Howard S. Wilkinson, rector of St. Thomas' Church. The meeting was devoted to reports of the missionary week and other church activities supported by the organization. Mrs. William Partridge, the treasurer, announced that the auxiliary's contributions to the church program for the year had exceeded the budget by $1,000.

Mrs. Pardee's talk on the united thank offering of the auxiliary was in line with the spirit of generous giving indicated by Mrs. Partridge's report. The "little blue box" in which members put their thank offering should be part of every Episcopal household, she said, and should receive contributions as a matter of habit on all occasions for social gratitude.

"The thank offering has the germ of all that is best in the study and work of the auxiliary, where gratitude is linked with giving," said Miss Pardee. "It exemplifies the theme of the triennial 'fellowship in faith and work.'"

New Officers Are Elected

The business meeting included the election of several new officers to serve with others who hold over from last year. Mrs. Frances C. Wallace, a member of St. John's Church of Bethesda, was elected to succeed Mrs. Walter Williams as vice president for Montgomery County and Mrs. Thomas Stewart, of All Saints Church, Chevy Chase, Md., was elected corresponding secretary, succeeding Mrs. Russell J. Borhek.

Harris, of Bladensburg, Md., vice president for Prince Georges County; Mrs. Richard Pembroke, of Park Hall, Md., vice president for St. Mary's County, and Mrs. Partridge, treasurer.

Rees, supply secretary; Mrs. Frank F. Rogers, chairman of finance; Mrs. Oliver J. Hart, chairman of the junior branch committee, and Mrs. F. B. Crother, director of the Church Periodical Club.

Mischa Elman to Give Season's Earnings To German Refugees of All Faiths

Noted Violinist, Here for White House Recital, Discloses Plans; Relates Father's Experiences Under Anti-Semitic Tsar

Mischa Elman, who knows first hand what political persecution is like, last night described his plans for cashing his fiddle's blue notes into bank notes to help Christians and Jews under Nazi oppression.

The short, bald and good humored concert violinist was in the Capital for a short visit to play at the White House last night. With him was Mrs. Elman, chic and brunette.

Elman is about to do something that, as far as could be learned, no musical artist has ever done before, namely, devote virtually an entire concert season to charity. Proceeds of his recitals in 25 cities from coast to coast will be used to aid Protestant, Catholic and Jewish refugees from Germany.

"Doing this will be a pleasure to me," he said while relaxing at the Hotel Mayflower before his White House performance. "The work to which the funds are dedicated affirms the basic American spirit of tolerance, humanity and generosity."

He remembers well the time his father took Mischa, the child, to St. Petersburg to enter him in the conservatory and how, because of the Tsar's anti-Semitic regulations, Papa Elman had to walk the streets of nights or sleep on park benches since hotels barred Jews.

Eventually, however, the father, a teacher of Hebrew, received special permission to live in the czarish capital while his son was learning the violin.

But the refugee problem comes closer to Mr. and Mrs. Elman than that. The latter has many kinfolk in the Reich. She went to a New York pier not long ago to meet one of them, a young man whose emigration the couple had arranged. They waited and waited, still he did not get off the ship.

Then they made anxious inquiries. They learned the youth was dead, a suicide on shipboard.

"He had been in a concentration camp," said Mrs. Elman. "Why he killed himself we don't know. He must have been driven out of his mind."

Elman has appeared in several recitals and concerts this season, including one in Washington recently, but he is accepting no more private bookings. From now on he plays only in the Mischa Elman Nonsectarian Refugee Concerts.

The tour opens in New York's Carnegie Hall on January 21. Proceeds from all appearances will be divided equally among the American Committee for Christian German Refugees, Committee for Catholic Refugees from Germany and the American Jewish Joint Distribution Committee.

Former Gov. Alfred E. Smith of New York, is chairman of the national committee directing the tour.

Participants included members of staffs of United States embassies, legations and consulates—five from Chile, two from Bolivia, two from Ecuador, one from Colombia, one from Panama, eight from Peru and two from the State Department.

Duggan explained "all the meetings will be confidential" and added that "I doubt if we will be able to provide anything for publication."

Daladier Gives Tunisia Pledge Against Italy

French Premier's Visit Stirs Fascist Demand For More Rights

By the Associated Press.

Tunis, Tunisia, Jan. 3.—Premier Daladier tonight told French and Tunisian officials that "France has the force to assure your security."

He spoke at a banquet in honor of his visit to this French North African protectorate while local Italian Fascist leaders circulated a demand for equal rights for Italian nationals in Tunisia.

"France will never permit your efforts to be turned from the goal which is to create here on African soil a human community comparable to the French," Daladier said.

He said his words were intended for the 18,000,000 population of the French North African empire of Tunisia, Algeria and Morocco.

The notice formulating Italian demands declared the 1896 convention giving Italians equal rights in Tunisia with an opportunity to share in the government must be maintained or extraterritorial rights must "automatically be re-established in favor of Italians."

The finding and confiscation of the pirate radio station mounted on a camouflaged truck, led to the discovery of the alleged conspiracy, it was disclosed. Periodical broadcasts of anti-Nazi propaganda in German from a mysterious station created a sensation here two years ago.

Though the announcer asserted that he was speaking from this or that city in Germany, it was commonly thought at the time that the station was in some adjacent country near the frontier, or on a ship in the Baltic.

The pirate announcer commonly asserted that he was speaking for an underground organization with a strong following within the Reich, urged all Germans who had a good Fatherland at heart to listen in, said he would speak from different locations on each occasion and pointed to the difficulties in operating a mobile station in the face of police precautions.

On occasion, he went so far almost as to taunt the Nazi police for their failure to put a stop to the anti-Nazi propaganda activities over the air.

Rebels Cut Vital Loyalist Road, Halt French Aid

Artesa Captured in Northern Push; Castelldans Also Taken

By the United Press.

Hendaye, France, Jan. 3.—Spanish insurgent headquarters announced tonight the capture of Artesa de Segre, key to loyalist communications in northern Catalonia and the first major prize of Gen. Franco's 12-day-old offensive.

At the same time, Franco's armies at the southern end of the 90-mile Catalonian front claimed to have seized Castelldans and to have advanced to within five miles of Borjas Blancas.

At the extreme southern end of the front in the ragged Llena and Montsant mountains insurgent columns struck from the north across 4,000-foot peaks and captured La Figuera, then pressed on to within four miles of heavily-fortified Falset.

The capture of Artesa on the bank of the Segre 66 miles northwest of Barcelona and 29 miles north of Lerida cut the highway leading north to the French border over which great quantities of war supplies have reached the government armies.

London, Jan. 3 (AP).—The British foreign office today instructed C. B. Jarram, acting agent at Burgos, to obtain the best possible legal aid for Ernest Golding, pro-consul at San Sebastian, and his wife, arrested by Insurgents on espionage charges.

D.C. Suffrage Again Asked Of House

Resolution Would Change Constitution To Permit Ballot And Representation

While reorganization of Senate and House District committees awaited party causes, the District's legislative machinery got into motion yesterday with introduction of a half-dozen bills.

One House measure was a resolution to amend the Constitution to give Washingtonians local suffrage and national representation. It came from the new House District Committee chairman, Representative Jennings Randolph (Democrat), of West Virginia. The resolution again will be referred to the House Judiciary Committee.

Another bill, sponsored by Representative Bland (Democrat), of Virginia, would stop construction of a motor vehicle inspection station on the farmers' market site in Southwest Washington.

Old Bills Revived

Among yesterday's crop of bills received were:

Two by Representative Lemke (Republican), of North Dakota, to abolish compulsory vaccination of public school pupils, and to provide for the redemption of real estate sold in foreclosure sales.

A reclassification of the wage scale of coal passers and firemen employed in the custodial service of the public schools, by Representative Curley (Democrat), of New York.

Authorization for the Secretary of the Navy to erect an armory in the District for the use of the Naval Reserves and Marine Reserve Corps.

Randolph to Co-operate

Randolph, who will become House District Committee chairman following the Democratic caucus tomorrow, issued a statement saying it will be his purpose to co-operate with the residents of Washington to secure enactment of legislation beneficial to the District.

Tomorrow the District budget, carrying approximately $50,000,000 in revenue estimates, will be submitted to Congress by the President, but House hearings will not get under way before March, due to the priority of the War Department supply bill.

Studying to Become Better Housewives at New Dennison School

The Dennison Vocational School, Thirteenth and Allison streets northwest opened yesterday without the loss of stride or spoon. Training in the quarters embraces cosmetology (left), demonstrated by Thelma Wynn who shampoos Yvonne Zollinhofer's hair. Homemaking (center) is another course. Mrs. Eleanor Owen, instructor, shows Virginia Fogle and Hilda Marshall now to make a bed. Last but not least is cooking, either for cafeteria or tea room. Over the stove are Lillie Virginia Lewis and Betty Ann Forbes

William Sullivan Leaves $350,000; Nephew Gets Firm

A $350,000 estate was left to relatives by William D. Sullivan, insurance and real estate man who died here December 14. Attorneys Frederick R. Gibbs and Preston C. King, jr., filed Mr. Sullivan's will in District court yesterday.

The will named as executors the widow, Mrs. Bessie D. Sullivan, 3015 P street northwest, and Gibbs.

Mr. Sullivan left his firm, W. D. Sullivan Co., to his nephew, Edmund M. O'Sullivan, and gave to a niece, Cecilia W. Porz, $2,500, and to Effie M. Jenkins, 1419 Clifton street northwest, a former employe, $500.

To the following children of his late brother John D. Sullivan $1,000 each: Richard Sullivan, John Sullivan, Frederick Sullivan, Lillian Offutt, Laura Dulaney, Marie Bodson and Katherine Evans.

To the widow; all household and personal effects and half the personal property.

The remaining personal property equally to Edmund M. O'Sullivan and four sisters, Mrs. Katherine T. Heavey, Mrs. Mary E. Gibbs, Mrs. Ida I. Dolan, and Mrs. Cecilia L. Colbert.

To Mrs. Sullivan and O'Sullivan all the real estate, with the trust income to be divided one third to the widow and the remainder equally among O'Sullivan and the sisters.

D. C. Mental Clinic For Backward Children Sought

Plans for a modern mental hygiene clinic to care for the District's "problem" children are being developed by health officials, it was revealed yesterday.

Spurred on by President Roosevelt's keen interest in the District health situation, Dr. Daniel L. Seckinger, assistant health officer, said yesterday the department would seek a consultant and 3 medical case workers for this work.

Dr. Seckinger said it would require about $10,000 for the first year.

Dr. Seckinger explained there were many children in the low mental group, whose history could be obtained by a case worker, followed by a consultation with the psychiatrist, and some methods could be determined for the betterment of the child.

Autopsy Fails To Solve Death Of Mrs. Corley

New York City police yesterday ordered further investigation of the death of Mrs. Virginia Corley, 35, former National Research Council employe, whose body was discovered in her Washington Square apartment Monday. An autopsy failed to show the cause of death.

Drugs found beside the dead woman, together with vital organs, the Associated Press reported, will be sent to Dr. Alexander O. Gettler, New York toxicologist, for chemical and microscopic examination.

Smith Asks Triumvirate to Rule Airport

Bill Portends Battle For Control of Field; CAA Has Authority Now

The question of who will operate the Gravelly Point airport may plague the Seventy-sixth Congress.

Representative Smith (Democrat), of Virginia, long a sponsor of Gravelly Point, introduced a bill to place management of the WPA-financed airport in the hands of a National Capital airport commission.

The Civil Aeronautics Authority had been expected to take over operation of the flying field. The law gives the agency created by the last Congress clear authority to "operate and maintain" as well as build airports by including them in the definition of "air navigation facilities."

Smith's bill, modeled after last year's measure, provides that the National Capital Airport Commission will comprise the Assistant Secretary of Commerce in charge of aviation, the director of the National Capital Parks and the United States district engineer.

When reminded that the Commerce Secretary no longer has control of aviation matters, Smith said he probbaly will substitute the chairman of the Civil Aeronautics Authority.

The National Capital Airport Commission, under Smith's proposal, would be authorized to appoint a manager for the airport

The bill stipulates that whatever funds may be necessary for operation of the airport shall be appropriated from Federal funds in the Treasury.

D.C. Citizens Groups Attack Patman's Chain Store Tax Bill

A plan to tax chain stores, introduced yesterday as House Bill No. 1, by Representative Patman (Democrat), Texas, last night was attacked by three citizens' associations. Two of the groups voted in favor of the Overton plan of a Federal contribution based on a sliding scale.

Columbia Heights Citizens

The Columbia Heights Citizens Association last night protested the purpose of the Patman chain-store tax bill, and asked the support of all other civic organizations in combating the measure.

Their resolution, introduced by Charles T. Clayton, declared the bill was "class legislation" which attempted to interfere with "the sound economic development" of the chain stores in the "fancied interest" of other middlemen.

The association renewed an earlier plea for a subway system in Washington. Mrs. Marie Maddox, chairman of the public utilities committee, declared the plan would give Washington a refuge from future air raids, and also provide the only solution to the District's traffic problem. The group also indorsed construction of municipal garages to help clear the city streets.

A resolution was adopted commending Senator John H. Overton, of the Senate sub-committee on appropriations, for his plan, announced Monday, to scrap the Federal lump sum payment to the District, in favor of payments based on the Federal property in Washington.

H. Kenneth Kugel, District smoke regulation engineer, told the association his office needed additional personnel for smoke inspection.

Takoma Park

The Citizens Association of Takoma, District of Columbia, last night went on record opposing recently proposed pedestrian control traffic regulations, and urged an education program to attain increased pedestrian safety.

The unit also opposed any tax which would destroy chain stores. It requested that Third street northwest be opened between Allison and Decatur streets; and that a traffic light be installed at Fourth and Cedar streets northwest.

Installation of a sloping floor in the Paul Junior High School also was asked. Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Livsie were inducted as members. Inspector Maurice Collins, of the Police Department, discussed cooperation between police and citizens organizations. Art Kriemelmeyer, director of Takoma Park playground and recreational center, was lauded in a resolution for his part in annual Christmas celebration.

Manor Park

Senator Overton's proposed change of Federal contributions to the District from a lump sum to a sliding-scale proportion of the total expenses was backed last night by the Manor Park Citizens Association. The unit urged that the scale be based on Federal untaxed improved real property, and that the District assessor have a voice in setting up the basis.

The organization passed a resolution demanding reduction of the city's tax-exempt property list. The Patman chain store tax proposal was turned down, as was a District sales tax plan. It backed the school board's request for a deficiency appropriation. Mr. and Mrs. D. C. Heynes joined the unit.

'Railway Life' Banquet Given Church Youth

Rev. Hillary Chief Speaker at Novel Entertainment

With the "railway of life" as the keynote and "Casey Jones" as the theme song, young people of the Ninth Street Christian Church last night staged their annual banquet in the parish hall. The affair was a feature of youth month, launched last Sunday.

Led by "Station Master" Clifford H. Jope, the pastor, and Conductor George O. Taylor, regional religious education director, garbed as trainmen, the youths presented a lively four-hour program, climaxed by an address by Assistant Passenger Agent" Hillary T. Bowen, of Baltimore.

Rev. Hillary Speaks

Seated at tables filled with miniature locomotives and other railroad models, the diners were told by the Rev. Mr. Hillary that the "Christian railroad of life" has succeeded because of its emphasis on three important "stations" in life. These, he pointed out, are: "Blessed are the Meek;" "Happy Mourning" and "Blessed Are the Poor in Spirit."

A realistic touch was added by two veteran railroaders — G. Edmonds, of the Navy Yard, and John Corbett, local legislative representative of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, who spoke briefly.

Talks by Youths

Among the youth representatives who spoke were Jane Daniel, Raybern Keagy, Hope Creel and James Moudy. Special guests were Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Harding, of Oregon, Mrs. Jope's parents; Mrs. Mary Longfellow, former missionary to India, recently named president of the Maryland Women's Missionary Board of the Disciples of Christ; Don Forney, assistant superintendent of the Ninth Street Sunday School and Mrs. Forney, and Henry Bowen, the principal speaker's father.

Auto Victim Dies; Another Is Injured

Lee Washburn, 47, Ardmore, Md., died last night at Casualty Hospital from injuries sustained December 19 in an automobile accident near his home.

Wesley Hicks, 27, Arlington, Va., was seriously injured on the Columbia pike when he was hit by a car police said was driven by Lester Braden, 28, 1349 Q street northwest. Hicks was admitted to Emergency Hospital with a fractured leg and possible fractured pelvis.

Askins Must Stand Trial in Murders

Askins was charged with stabbing to death Elizabeth Brown, 26, and of giving Ruth McDonald, 31, a poisoned drink.

Askins had been reported as a Howard University student but officials last night declared he was not enrolled there.

New School to Train Girls To Be Model Housewives

Washington's newest vocational training school opened its doors to students yesterday. One hundred and fifty girls of junior and senior high school age went to work on courses designed to fit them for careers or to make them good housewives.

The new structure is the $336,000 Dennison Vocational School, Thirteenth and Allison streets northwest. It contains everything from a completely equipped beauty shop to a modern five-room apartment.

A new method of preparing girls for a happy home life is being adopted in the home making course. The teacher will visit the students' home to see how they are applying knowledge gained in the course. This is made possible by the new George-Deen act, under which four teachers have been placed in vocational schools in Washington to expand vocational training services.

To Practice At Home

"In this course, girls will get a chance to practice at home what they learn in managing the model apartment," Dr. Chester W. Holmes, assistant superintendent in charge of junior high and vocational schools, says. "It will be the first time any teacher has gone into the homes of her students for further instruction. We hope parents will co-operate."

During the morning, the girls will start the daily routine of the modern housewife, from making up beds to planning and preparing meals and performing the other functions of the smoothly managed home. They will be instructed in care of household equipment, budgeting, care of children, home nursing.

In the afternoon teachers will visit the "home projects." Mrs. Eleanor Owen, a teacher, said one of the girls in her class is going to take over preparation of the family breakfasts for two weeks and another will launch a project to improve her wardrobe.

Shop Management Taught

Cafeteria and tea room training will be separate courses, Miss M. E. Lackey, principal of Dennison, said. In the cafeteria course, students prepare and cook meals for the entire school body's lunch. These courses are for students who wish to specialize.

On the first floor of the new school is a fully equipped beauty shop where cosmetology courses are taught. Students, as in the other courses, start out with the fundamental tasks and then work up to operation and management of shops.

Academic education is not forgotten. For each three hours in trade courses, there are three hours in related and academic subjects on the junior and senior high school level.

While the school has accommodations for 300 girls, no concerted drive for increased enrollment will be made until the close of the year.

Corrosive Poison Killed Alpern, Operation Shows

Carl C. Alpern, 31-year-old Labor Department attorney, died a violent death from the effects of a corrosive poison, a post mortem operation disclosed yesterday.

A death certificate was withheld by Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald, however, until after a chemical analysis can be made to determine the type of poison. Contents of Alpern's stomach were sent to a pathologist.

Alpern was found dead in his apartment at the Chastleton Hotel Monday. His body was turned over to his older brother, Henry Alpern, of Pittsburgh, late yesterday to be returned there for burial. The elder Alpern said: "He was a brilliant boy, and so far as I know had no reason to take his life."

Trade Board Urges Repeal Of Lump Sum

Asks Percentage Payment by U. S. Government Based On Land Holdings

Senator Overton's proposal to reestablish annual Federal payment to the District on a percentage, sliding-scale basis yesterday won approval of the Washington Board of Trade.

The Louisiana Democrat, recently appointed chairman of the Senate sub-committee on District Appropriations, plans to end the present lump-sum contribution and revive a proportionate payment by the Federal Government based on Federal land holdings in the District.

Addison Praises Plan

"This is in line with ideas which have been advanced by the Board of Trade ever since establishment of the lump-sum system." Francis G. Addison, jr., president of the trade board, declared yestreday.

"We will be anxious to give Senator Overton all data in our files on this subject. Our position is very clearly set forth in our testimony before the advisory committee for study of the tax structure of the District."

At the recent hearings of the advisory committee representatives of the trade board pointed out that Washington is a national city designed and operated for the purposes of the Federal Government.

Federal Needs Govern

Operation of the ordinary municipal functions, such as schools, traffic, zoning, etc., the board speakers argued, is keyed to the requirements of the Federal Government. But the Federal Government is not the principal taxpayer for these municipal services as a similar-sized private enterprise would be.

For 42 years the Federal Government paid 50 per cent of the operating costs of the District, the board representatives said, and now, on the basis of the 1939 budget, the lump-sum payment of $5,000,000 amounts to only about 10 per cent of the costs. Board of Trade speakers at the hearing added:

"If a fair payment by the Federal Government is once established, then there should be an elastic rule which would provide for the increase of such payment when additional taxable land is purchased by the Federal Government, or to compensate for additional services it requires."

Lucius Lamar 3d and Sister, Priscilla, In Double Wedding After Twin Elopements

Post Staff Photos.

MR. AND MRS. LUCIUS Q. C. LAMAR 3D — MR. AND MRS. EUGENE CHANDLER.

Lucius Q. C. Lamar 3d, whose great-grandfather was a justice of the United States Supreme Court, and his sister, Priscilla, took marriage vows in a double wedding ceremony at St. Anne's Church, Wisconsin avenue and Yuma street, last night and then went home to tell the family of their double elopment Saturday at Fredericksburg, Va.

There could be no doubt, they contended, that the two marriage services, one civil the other religious, made the brother the husband of his "steady girl," Violet Jahn, 21, of 4222 Thirty-seventh street northwest, and the sister the wife of her "best beau," Eugene Chandler, 21, of 1328 Nineteenth street northwest.

The first stop of the young couples—Lucius is 22, a year older than his sister, and a recent graduate of Western High School—was at the Lamar home at 114 East Bradley lane, Chevy Chase, Md.

There they were greeted by Lucius' father, Lucius Q. C. Lamar 3d, a prominent Washington attorney, and other members of the family. The elder Lamar described his reactions as "shock . . . great surprise." But after the first amazement of the announcement had worn off there were smiles for the elopers.

Lamar said he had no plans for his son and daughter, but Chandler's mother, Mrs. Frances Chandler, told a Post reporter she would "not stand" for the marriage and would "certainly try to have it annulled."

Family Not Surprised

At the home of Lamar's bride, Raymond Betz, an uncle, said members of her family would not be "surprised in the least." He said Lamar and his wife had been "going together" for only a few months but that it was obvious they were very much in love.

The former Miss Jahn is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wendolin Jahn and the granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Betz, all of whom live at the Thirty-seventh street address. The grandfather is employed at the Veterans Administration. The bride was a student at St. Patrick's Academy here.

Chandler and his bride have been "going steady" for the last four years, members of their families said. They met while he was a student at Massanutten Military Academy in Virginia.

For about seven months the couple have been "double dating," attending movies, dances, parties together. Saturday they decided to make the arrangement a lifetime proposition. They drove to Fredericksburg—where marriage licenses and marriages may still be obtained in a single day—and were married at 12:30 p. m.

Then they went out to celebrate their union and the New Year simultaneously. Each went to his respective home after the celebration until the second ceremony last night.

Reporter Is Witness

The marriage was performed while the church was illuminated by only a few lights and candles. The Rev. Russell A. Phelan read the service. A reporter and his wife, who had learned of the event only shortly before, were the only witnesses.

Lamar's grandfather was a member of the Greeley Arctic Relief Expedition in 1883, and solicitor for the Postoffice Department during the Wilson Administration. His great-grandfather for whom he was named, was President Cleveland's Secretary of the Interior before appointment to the Supreme Court.

'The Duke of West Point' Reflects Academy Spirit

An Able Cast Makes Service Romance Seem Real; 'Movie Quiz Contest' Entries Hit High Mark; News Notes and Gossip of the Theater

THERE is, of course, the customary vein of romance running through the picture's entire dramatic structure and there are many marching columns of the world's most perfectly drilled cadets; the Red, White and Blue frequently gets into the cameras' sharpest focus and occasional strolls along Flirtation Walk creep into the action, too, but it seemed to this outpost during the preview screening of "The Duke of West Point," yesterday afternoon, that this United Artists release takes fewer liberties with Military Academy discipline and tradition than any comparable service picture the cinema has produced.

BELL

It is a definitely realistic treatment of the scholastic, social and athletic life of West Point that Producer Edward Small has brought to the screen in this subject, opening Friday at Loew's Capitol Theater. Skillfully spotted through the development of an interesting and believable story are many scenes of high excitement and suspense. They invariably come along at precisely the right time to center attention and whip up audience enthusiasm. For Mr. Small has not permitted the minor aspects of "The Duke of West Point" to submerge the loftier purpose of a romantic drama that has a good deal to say on the topic of character building and says it effectively and convincingly. These more significant passages of the play are conveyed sharply and intelligently through the medium of sustained dialogue that might bog the picture down from time to time, if Mr. Small and his director, Alfred E. Green, had not always held one of those exciting sequences in reserve for use at the opportune moment. The recurrent impression that the picture is pretty talky unfailingly is dispelled by some sudden burst of animated action that gives the film an uncommonly fine balance.

An "All-Star Cast," Without Any Stars

Those who rely upon the presence of "big names" in the cast of characters, as an assurance of fine entertainment, are apt to do themselves an injustice by applying that doubtful yardstick to this film play There are not any "top flight" stars in "The Duke of West Point." There are, however, any number of especially adept players who comprise a cast that is as nicely balanced as the dramatic qualities of the play in which they appear. Without particularizing as to the contributions each makes to the well-rounded narrative revealed upon the screen, there can be little doubt that Louis Hayward, Richard Carlson, Joan Fontaine, Alan Curtis, Tom Brown, Jed Prouty, Marjorie Gateson, Emma Dunn, Jonathan Hale and the numerous others who have a finger in this fine strip of celluloid will leave a distinctly pleasant impression and the conviction that they have made "The Duke of West Point" ring true, to coin a phrase.

As one of the characters remarks during one of the picture's more serious moments, there is something about West Point that "gets you." It "gets you" a little more forcefully in this subject than in any other I have seen—and still would, even without that rousing ice hockey game that marks its stirring climax.

In casting "The Duke," as long as we are on the subject, Mr. Small seems to have exercised a keen and kindly interest in a considerable number of players who were stars in their own rights, back in the old silent days of the screen, but these later years are seen only briefly and infrequently in "bits." Among them are Kenneth Harlan, Mary MacLaren and Edward Earle. Kenneth Harlan, in his day, was one of the handsomest and most popular young leading men appearing before the cameras. Now he is seen scarcely more than momentarily as a varsity football coach. Miss MacLaren, a sister of the fabulously lovely Katherine McDonald, "The American Beauty," has the role of nurse in a few fleeting scenes in which Tom Brown is strapped up with a broken neck. Edward Earle, whose fame antedates that of the other two, has a quick minute as the hospital doctor. In the old days he was leading man with Mary Pickford and others of the gelatin great. Jed Prouty has escaped from the "Jones Family" assignment long enough to be seen as Tom Brown's doting father. And so it goes. One suspects that these people all are grateful to Mr. Small for not having forgotten that he "knew them when."

Darrieux Next on Belasco Screen

While sly Sacha Guitry goes merrily on his way, telling "The Story of a Cheat" to Belasco audiences, the theater management has been busy planning the presentation on Lafayette Square of worthy successors to the Gallic masterpiece of novelty and impertinence. The most recent addition to the Belasco's growing list of coming features is Danielle Darrieux's latest starring vehicle, "Abused Confidence," which not so long ago won the coveted first prize at the Paris International Exposition.

"Abused Confidence" is said to provide La Darrieux with one of her happiest assignments. Having achieved wide praise for the power of her portrayal opposite Charles Boyer in "Mayerling," and then demonstrated a complete command of comedy in "The Rage of Paris," the richly gifted Miss Darrieux in "Abused Confidence" impersonates a young law student who is plunged into a desperate situation by the death of a grandfather who had borne the cost of her education. Friendless and hungry, she masquerades as the daughter of wealthy parents and so manages to continue her course. What befalls her in the pursuit of this deception is said to afford the star another opportunity to demonstrate her skill as a dramatic actress.

Many nebulous rumors to the contrary notwithstanding, the "Movie Quiz Contest," conducted by the motion picture industry as part of its "Motion Pictures Are Your Best Entertainment" campaign, gives every promise of proving a huge success. Numerous Hollywood columnists and other commentators scattered over the country have given voice, from time to time, to the opinion that the "Movie Quiz" was a colossal floperoo. A wire from Harold B. Franklin, general chairman of the campaign, to Frank La Falce, of the Warner Brothers Washington organization, in charge of local publicity for the movie drive, seems to refute these amiable ladies and gentlemen. According to Mr. Franklin, more than 1,000,000 "Movie Quiz Contest" entries were delivered to the New York headquarters of the campaign yesterday. Mail pouches full of entries poured into the office all day. This was the first mail delivery following the contest deadline, December 31, 1938. A large staff now is engaged in opening and sorting the entries for delivery to the judges in order that as early an announcement of winners as possible may be made.

Garbo's First "Talkie" Revived Tonight

"Anna Christie," Greta Garbo's first all-talking picture, will be presented by the Film Society of Washington as third event of its current season, in Pierce Hall, Fifteenth and Harvard streets, tonight at 8:30 o'clock. Adapted from Eugene O'Neill's stage play of the same name, "Anna Christie" was produced by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer in 1930. Clarence Brown directed, with the late Marie Dressler, George Marion and Charles Bickford leading the supporting cast.

And that reminds me. The Foreign Language Cinema is resuming its regular Saturday night presentations in Pierce Hall on January 7. The feature picture on that date will be the Viennese operetta, "Zigeunerbaron," by Johann Strauss, to be followed on January 14 by Gigli in another musical work, "Ave Maria," and on January 21 by the Swedish film, "Sol Over Sverige." These productions all will be clarified by subtitles in English.

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Calif., Jan. 3.—Heavy, heavy what hangs over, or maybe we should just call this the hangover of 1938 or resolutions of 1939. I didn't bother to take down the resolutions of the stars because they'd be just the same old thing.

HEDDA HOPPER

But the resolutions of the workers—those boys who make the wheels go round—the heads of the property departments, carpenter shops, electricians, cameras, montage shots, special effects, talent and music departments, they've really got something to make resolutions about.

O. C. Stratton, of Paramount, says if any more scenes are written showing a new born colt, he'll hold the writer personally responsible and make him at least learn the facts of animal life. After weeks of delay, they are now thinking of performing a Caesarian operation on the fourth mare for the "Ladies From Kentucky." Stratton's sure this thoroughbred is no lady and that she's holding out for more salary.

Cameraman Roy Hunter will invent new dyes. He's already given his boys pink, amber and rose lights for their cameras. Pink for the ladies, amber for the men who neglected to shave in the morning. Now he's trying to find a color which will make the face disappear entirely if it's tired.

Montage man, Fraciot Edouart, has promised himself two days instead of five hours to build the Taj Mahal, and Talent Scout Artie Jacobson will try to find a Gary Cooper, Ronald Colman and Basil Rathbone rolled into one for Paramount.

Harry Albiez, Woody Van Dyke's property boy, says no more coffee and cakes for his boss if he insists on another trip to Africa, or the Arctic Circle—the reason why—so far all his extremities have been frozen. And I am personally offering a prize of my $5 gold piece which I can't get out of the bank to anyone who doesn't like Harry.

Red Golden, Clarence Brown's assistant, has resolved to stick to English-speaking directors. On "The Great Waltz" he never knew whether they were talking to him or about him.

Whitey Henry, chief of police at Metro, will let in all old friends, even if they are tripping over their own beards because when the new gate was opened the avalanche of complaints practically gave him a nervous breakdown.

Cutter Danny Gray wants to leave in all the close-ups of character people when they are important to the story. He stepped on so many of their faces on the cutting room floor, he says he feels like a murderer.

Ed Willis, property mogul, expects another spree of shopping in Europe. You know the kind when you enter a building and say, "What pretty knick-knacks, I'll take the entire thing."

Squat Strike Staged by Indians

The braves are working, or, rather, aren't working, in "Union Pacific," which Cecil B. DeMille is producing.

Yesterday they were forced to appear before the cameras dressed in G-strings and little else, all according to the script.

But today dawned bright and cold and sub-zero. The braves were loath to forsake their two-pants suits for the silly Indian costumes. They huddled, chatted and chattered—and squatted.

Read Between Lines in Her Face!

The scene is the terrace of a Paris cafe, complete with mustachioed waiters, cocottes, rug-sellers and what have you. Helen Westley, who plays Claudette Colbert's drunken stepmother in "Zaza," sits sipping an aperitif in blowsy nonchalance. Her tawdry hat teeters precariously on her brow, her pouched and wrinkled eyes squint as if trying to stop the place from reeling and her loose cheeks hang haggardly.

"No? How are you going to know just by looking at my face that I'm aware of him?" asks Helen.

Director Explains How To 'Die' Safely and Painlessly for Cameras

By Frederick C. Othman,

United Press Hollywood Correspondent.

Hollywood, Jan 3.—While horrified pedestrians looked on, two boys fell in front of a speeding motor truck today—and how this was accomplished without hurting anybody makes another story about the movie makers' ingenuity.

The scene was a New York slum, on the back lot of Universal studios. The picture was "Code of the Streets" and in it you will see Frankie Thomas dash carelessly in front of a 6-ton truck going 30 miles an hour. Just as he steps before this behemoth, James McCallion jumps on him from behind and both fall to the pavement.

How It Was Done

First off, Director Harold Young rehearsed the extras on the sidewalk in the art of walking exactly 50 per cent slower than normal.

Then Young places a mattress in the middle of the street, so Thomas and McCallion could fall without skinning their shins. Next he had a heavy wooden barricade bolted to the pavement in front of the mattress. The next step was to rehearse the truck, which had to be driven at 15 miles per hour, in neutral gear and slam into the bumper, which brought it up short.

All this took time, but eventually Young had everything set. The pedestrians were creeping along the walks. The truck was ambling slowly down the street. An instant before it came to the bumper, Thomas and McCallion fell to the mattress. There was a crash when the front wheels hit the timbers and the truck stopped short.

That's all there was to the acting. When the film runs through the cameras it will move 50 per cent faster than normal, thus making the truck speed and the pedestrians walk at their usual pace—and we still can't get over being excited about the tricks the makers of movies constantly are inventing.

Easy on the Eyes

And talking about tricks, we bumped into Joseph Valentine, the cameraman, who has invented something that deserves big black headlines if it works, and he insists it will. His contribution to human welfare is the elimination of eyestrain and resultant headaches for movie audiences.

"All these years," he said, "most picture sets have had large areas of white. This made them easier to photograph, but the white caused glare and the glare caused eyestrain and I think that has kept a lot of people away from the movies.

"Now we've got a newly developed film, which needs about 50 per cent less light than before. So I'm doing some experimenting on the elimination of white.

Valentine's first whiteless picture was "Three Smart Girls Grow Up." The scene showed Deanna Durbin and one of her friends in a magnificent living room, of Valentine's devising.

The walls were lavender. The baseboards and wood trim were pale blue, while the statuary, stone work and the like were cream. The furniture was upholstered in similar shades. The layout looked somewhat funereal at first hand, but as Valentine explained, you will see it as black and white.

The only thing white in the whole scene was Miss Durbin's dress. Valentine didn't think that would make enough glare to hurt anybody's eyes. As for us, we could look indefinitely at Miss Durbin in a white dress—and eye-strain be hanged.

Esperantists Flood Director With Mail

Director Clarence Brown has to have an interpreter read his fan mail these days, with thousands of Esperantists throughout the world congratulating him on using the universal language in "Idiot's Delight," co-starring Norma Shearer and Clark Gable. Esperanto is spoken by minor players in several scenes of the picture, the first official use of the language in a motion picture.

By Leonard Lyons

New York, Jan. 3.

MAYOR FRANK HAGUE: Sympathizers of Joseph Scutellaro, defendant in your city's "Poormaster murder case," contributed $7,000 for a defense fund in his behalf. And he killed the Poormaster for failing to give him only $7.38 for two month's relief . . . Sam Leibowitz, Scutellaro's lawyer, presented $4,000 of that fund to the defendant's family . . . Leibowitz, in reminiscing about some of his famous cases, was asked about his trying civil cases. "I don't get a kick out of trying a civil case," he explained. "It would be like a cokie smoking a cigarette."

DISTRICT ATTORNEY DEWEY: Gov. Lehman's first address to the N. Y. State Legislature will include a plea for legislation outlawing evidence secured by wire-tapping, and the reversal of convictions based upon evidence obtained illegally . . . J. P. Morgan: Your daughter, Anne, is taking rhumba lessons—from a pro . . . Joe Louis: Mike Jacobs is offering the movie rights to your fight with John Henry Lewis for $10,000—but there are no takers . . . Newspaper Guild: The Brush-Moore chain of newspapers is negotiating to buy the Philadelphia Ledger.

AL CAPONE: Your son, who switched from Notre Dame to Miami University, after one year, will return to South Bend at the next semester . . . Guthrie McClintic: Your wife, Katharine Cornell, is writing her memoirs. Random House will publish the book . . . Will Hays: William Powell's new contract with M.-G.-M. is 65 pages long. And Leo McCarey's unit-contract with R.-K.-O is 125 pages long . . . George VI: The newspapers got all excited because Grace Moore curtsied before the Duchess of Windsor. She's been curtsying for years. That's the way Grace takes a bow.

LORETTA YOUNG: Doris Donaldson, the Broadway chorine who testified before the Grand Jury regarding the activities of your fiance, Wm. P. Buckner jr., is famed for her wit . . . She once told George White: "You should be more self-deprecating. See, I'm educated" . . . "Yeah?" White challenged. "Who was Leonardo Da Vinci?" . . . "Oh, I know," Doris informed, "he had something to do with gold. That's it, Gold" . . . "G'wan," White stated, "he was a man who romanced all the girls in his city" . . . "Well," returned Miss Donaldson, "is that Tin?"

NICK THE GREEK: The rejection slip used by the editors of For Men shows a picture of three men shooting craps, and the caption: "Sorry, No Dice" . . . Jimmy Hines: Supreme Court Justice McCook—before whom Dewey achieved his most famous convictions—phoned the widow of Magistrate Erwin, whom Dewey named as one of the "fixed" judges, in your trial. Erwin once was McCook's secretary. The jurist assured the widow that he has every confidence in Erwin's integrity . . . Eleanor Roosevelt: Contrary to any report, Mayris Chaney, your protegee who popularized the "Elearnor Glide," is not married to her dance partner, Edward Fox.

HENRY LUCE: The front cover of your magazine, Time, recently was devoted to a color photo of Rodgers & Hart, the song writers . . . Larry Hart now decries such publicity . . . "Publicity like that is good only for moral people," he confessed, "As for me, it just means that I can't go to any disreputable places without being recognized."

DIST. ATTORNEY GEOGHAN: The appointment of Michael Walsh, Brooklyn's Federal prosecutor, as Secretary of State is part of the build-up for him in preparation for next year's campaign. He's being groomed as your successor . . . Intl. Mark Twain Society: Two weeks ago you elected Will Cuppy to membership and placed him on your Humor committee. Cyril Clemens, Twain's nephew, helped induct him. Cuppy immediately bought a set of Mark Twain's books, and confessed that he never had read them . . . Orson Welles: George Ade, in whose honor you were named "George Orson," told me yesterday that he didn't listen to your Martian broadcast—and that even if he had, it wouldn't have scared him.

HAPPY NEW YEAR

Tracy, Borzage Map Indian Cruise

Director Frank Borzage and Spencer Tracy are seriously considering an offer made to them by Cecil Rust, Ceylon theater magnate and plantation owner, to be his guests on his rubber plantation.

Inasmuch as Borzage had already planned on sailing to the South Seas upon completion of "I Take This Woman," he may decide to continue on to the Indian Ocean with Tracy as a "member of the crew."

Incidentally, Borzage's boat, formerly owned by Tay Garnett, has already made a voyage to Rust's plantation, so that there is no question concerning the seaworthiness of the craft.

Both in Film But Not Together

Although their names will appear together in the billing, the team of Burns and Allen actually is separated for the first time since they became partners in the old vaudeville days in "Honolulu," starring Eleanor Powell.

Each plays an important part, but they never even meet, let alone exchange dialogue lines throughout the picture. George plays the manager of Robert Young, a screen star, and goes to New York with a man who impersonates Young. Gracie goes to Honolulu with Eleanor Powell, who plays straight for Miss Allen's comedy.

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN:

Sensational noon-day headlines were confusing to folks still occupied with thoughts of Duke's last-minute defeat in the Rose Bowl . . . "Duke Will Go Home Alone; Wally Angry," read the big type . . . which was not referring to Wallace Wade's Blue Devils, but to a reported marital rift between Mr. and Mrs. David Windsor . . . Johnny Stone can have a job with the Nats the moment he decides to return to baseball, says Clark Griffith . . . six of Bill McGowan's umpiring school pupils have already been placed in Class D league jobs . . to charges that it is not a progressive league, the American League has answered . . . by issuing an order that in 1939 all batracks must be removed from the top of the dug-out steps and hung on the wall above the bench . . . it's revolutionary.

POVICH.

This department's idea of the classic quotations of 1938: George Preston Marshall's "The Redskins will not miss Cliff Battles" . . . Max Schmeling's "Choe Louis does not heet hard" . . . Don Budge's "I have decided not to turn professional" . . . The California Football Writers' "The Trojans picked a soft touch when they selected Duke as their Rose Bowl opponent" . . . Jockey Charley Kurtsinger's "War Admiral will go to the front and run away and hide from Seabiscuit" . . . Gabby Hartnett's "The Yankees can be licked" . . . The National Boxing Association's "Tony Galento is the outstanding contender for Joe Louis' title" . . . Clark Griffith's "The Bonura-Kuhel deal was a steal for the Washington Club."

Colonels Discover Reason for Poor Year

English Jockey Steve Donoghue, in a newly-published book, reviews the famed Papyrus-Zev race in which he was licked by Zev and Earl Sande . . . The Louisville Club, which finished in the American Association cellar in 1938, found out why, a couple of days ago . . . an error had been made in laying out the diamond and the bases were too far apart . . . the Washington club had the record pay roll of big league history in 1927 when Tris Speaker drew a $35,000 salary . . . player salaries in that year totaled $284,000 . . . In 1938, the Nats' salary list totaled $185,000, fourth highest in the league . . . Christmas puppies have wandered off the reservation in great numbers, the lost-and-found columns indicate . . . more the pity that the only score permitted by Duke in 600 minutes of football lost 'em the Rose Bowl game.

The new Hollywood, Fla., race track may or may not open . . . reports are that construction was started by the promoters in the hope that Joseph D. Widener, operator of Hialeah, would buy them out . . . but Widener made no offer and they find themselves with a race track on their hands . . . Dick Richards, owner of the Detroit Lions, proposes that professional football players be limited to five years in the National Football League . . . in order that the game may be speeded up . . . but the rule has no chance for adoption inasmuch as it would rid the league of such players as Mel Hein, Ernie Pinckert, Pete Bausch, Clark Hinkle, Arnold Herber and force such as Don Hutson to retire after one more year . . . Buck Newsom this year will be the highest-salaried player on the Browns' roster since George Sisler was released more than a decade ago.

Ellsworth Vines, rated as a jittery tennis player, was beaten the first times he faced Bill Tilden and Fred Perry as a professional . . . Tilden, replying to charges that his matches with Vines were "an act," used to deny it emphatically, but always added: "If they are, I don't think it would make any difference. If we play good tennis, I think the fans will be satisfied" . . . when Don Budge turned pro, he retained his $5,000-a-year job as consultant to a sporting-goods firm . . . long-shot forecast for 1939: Hank Greenberg will break Babe Ruth's 60-home run record . . . when he sold Zeke Bonura and Al Simmons, Clark Griffith rid himself of his 1939 hold-out troubles, among other things.

Buck Newsom Promises to Win 20 Games

A fight writer and a football writer stand at a New York bar on a Saturday morning tossing off a few . . . they toss off a few more and the football writer says: "Well, ssho long, Joe. Gotta get over to Philly to cover the Army-Navy game. Take care of yourshelf, old boy, old boy. Lesh have one more quick one" . . . the quick one dispatched, the football writer hustled to Philadelphia . . . four hours later, the game covered, his story in, he wandered back to the same bar . . . there he found his boxing-writer friend still giving battle to Bacchus, one hand with a steadying grip on the mahogany . . "Hi, Joe, have one on me," he greeted the fight writer . . . turning around, the latter blinked. "You shtill here, Harry? Better get going over to Philly. Never miss an assignment. Tha'sh what I always shay."

Whenever Pete Scalzo decides to retire from the ring, he can always make a living on the stage . . . his mimicry of a Greek restaurant counter man is a classic and has won him prizes on amateur night programs . . . New Year's greetings and salutations from Buck Newsom who predicts he'll win 20 games again in 1939 . . . American League umpires receive $300 and expenses for officiating in spring training games in the South . . . veteran umpires are excused from spring duties, but it is compulsory with umpires of less than five years big league experience . . . the Yankees' offer to sell the broadcasting rights to their home games for $150,000 has not yet attracted any sponsors . . . for the first time since he joined the Yankees, Lou Gehrig this year will take a salary cut . . . which may lift Joe DiMaggio to a position as the highest-paid player in baseball . . . DiMaggio last year drew $25,000 while Gehrig was paid $30,000 . . . Red Ruffing, at $20,000, rates with Carl Hubbell as the highest paid pitcher in the majors.

Football Rules Committee Adopts 2 Minor Changes

Colorado Springs, Colo., Jan. 3 (AP).—Only two changes in intercollegiate football rules, both concerning ineligible pass receivers, were adopted by the rules committee of the National Collegiate Athletic Association today.

The committee, in one of its most uneventful and shortest sessions in years, also ordered improvements and changes in football equipment to reduce injuries.

The changes, announced by Chairman Walter T. Okeson, of Lehigh University, five hours after the committee ended its final session, are:

1. The penalty for a forward pass striking an ineligible player shall be the loss of a down and 15 yards from the point of the previous down, instead of loss of the ball. The committee said the old penalty "seemed too severe."

2. All ineligible players—usually the center, guards and tackles—must remain on the line of scrimmage until after a pass is thrown. The penalty for violating this will be 15 yards and the play will also count as a down.

Both of these revisions were recommended by the American Football Coaches Association, at Chicago, last week. Other changes recommended by the coaches, Okeson said, were referred to the standing committee on rules changes for study.

Okeson said he and others of the committee, as well as football coaches present at the meetings here, believed the new rules would encourage the use of "shovel" passes—short passed behind or to the line of scrimmage.

"However, they may lead to longer runbacks by the opponents on intercepted passes," Okeson said, "because fewer players will now be allowed to go down under a pass."

Okeson's statement said the committee "recognized the country-wide demand" for improvements in equipment, especially with regard to cleats and thigh guards.

Four Speakers Are Named For Touchdown Club Banquet

Banqueteers of the Touchdown Club, of Washington, will hear four prominent speakers during the annual beefsteaking of the club at the Willard Hotel on Monday night.

Guests who will be called on will include distinguished Frederic A. Delano; Representative Jennings Randolph, unofficial "mayor" of the District of Columbia; Senator Tom Connally, of Texas, and Elton E. Wieman, head football coach of Princeton University.

The banquet, already a sell-out, will bring together at the speakers table such additional notables as Oscar L. Chapman, Assistant Secretary of the Interior; Senator Ernest Lundeen, of Minnesota; Representative Sam Rayburn, of Texas; Amon G. Carter, publisher of the Fort Worth Star Telegram, and Silliman Evans, chairman of the board of the Maryland Casualty Insurance Co.

Carter will arrive at the Washington Airport with "Little Davy" O'Brien, famed sparkplug of the Texas Christian eleven, on an American Airlines plane from Texas at 5:40 p. m. on Sunday. They will be met by the Touchdown Club's dinner committee, including Richard D. Daniels, Dr. David L. Borden, George K. Brobeck, Arthur Bergman, J. Leighton Cornwell, Charles R. Fenwick, E. P. Hardell, Admiral Emory S. Land, J. E. Magner, Lewis W. Thomas and Edward M. Welliver, and escorted to the Willard Hotel for a prebanquet reception.

During the dinner Arch McDonald, ace sports announcer of Station WJSV, will award his second annual McDonald trophy to the outstanding football player of university teams in the greater Washington area.

16,000 See Big Redhead Win Easily

Steady Game, Plus Good Service, Give Budge Straight Set Triumph

By the Associated Press.

New York, Jan. 3.—Carrot-topped Don Budge, former amateur ruler, made his professional tennis debut a successful one tonight before a capacity crowd of 16,700 fans at Madison Square Garden by routing Ellsworth Vines, professional champion, in straight sets, 6—3, 6—4, 6—2.

It was an astonishingly easy triumph for the 23-year-old California red-head who this year became the first player ever to make a clean sweep of the world's four major amateur titles. He got away to a shaky start to trail at 1-2 in the first set, but after he had broken Vines' service in the fourth game to draw even he was in virtually complete command throughout.

Yet as the final, conclusive test of Budge's ranking among the game's all-time greats, the match left a good deal to the customers' imagination. Vines was as erratic as only he can be and, while his famous forehand occasionally earned him handsome placements, he had great difficulty handling Budge's service and piled up a mountainous heap of errors with returns that went into the net or beyond the sidelines and baselines.

The customers, not quite as steeped in tennis etiquette as those Budge has been accustomed at Forest Hills and Wimbledon, showed their disappointment quite frankly. When Alice Marble, called to the microphone after the match, told them they had seen tennis "as fine as one could expect to see anywhere" there was a distinct boo, and not from the gallery alone.

Vines always figures his flat forehand specials to clear the net by a whisker and keep a fraction on an inch within the lines. Tonight, perhaps partially due to the pace Budge set him, he was missing by margins that had to be measured in feet.

The stroke analysis shows best the manner in which Vines, entering on his sixth year as a pro, was outsteadied by Budge, playing the first match in a tour that guarantees him $75,000. The 27-year-old veteran netted 34 times and had 46 outs to Don's 20 and 36. With 20 placements and five aces, he also had 10 more earned points than the red-head, but they weren't enough to offset his mistakes.

Vines, noted for his ability to come into the net behind his service, rarely moved up to the fore court. When he did, Budge showed him the error of that maneuver with a blistering backhand that left Elly rooted in his tracks. Budge finished off each set at top speed, racing through the last three games of each of the first two without a break and ripping off the last four of the final set in succession. Vines was able to carry only two games of that last chapter to deuce.

In the accompanying matches on the program, Dick Skeen, of Hollywood, Calif., defeated Bruce Barnes, of Austin, Tex., 6—2, 6—4, and Barnes and Vines defeated Budge and Skeen, 6—1, 6—4. The troupe moves on to Boston tomorrow night.

Tonight's capacity house counted for gross receipts of $47,120.35.

Pirates Sign Brown For Fifth Season

Pittsburgh, Jan. 3 (AP).—The Pittsburgh National League Baseball Club announced today Pitcher Mace Brown had signed a one-year contract for the 1939 season. The salary was not disclosed.

Brown, outstanding relief hurler in the major leagues last year, pitched in 51 games and was credited with 15 victories. The 1939 season will be his fifth season with the Pirates.

The big right-hander drove to Pittsburgh from his home in Greensboro, N. C., accompanied by Infielder Floyd (Pep) Young, who is scheduled to confer with President William Benswanger tomorrow.

Giants Sign Hubbell for '39 Season

To Get $22,500 As Terry Says No Salary Cuts; Arm Must Stand a Test

By the Associated Press.

New York, Jan. 3.—The signed contract of Carl Hubbell, left-handed mainstay of the New York Giants' hurling corps for the last 11 years, and chief question mark for 1939, was received by the club today.

Though Hubbell will have to prove this spring in training camp that he has recovered satisfactorily from an operation for the removal of a bone chip from his elbow, Manager Bill Terry has announced there would be no salary reductions this season.

There was widespread fear that Hubbell's sore arm would end one of the greatest of modern pitching careers. Last August 18, almost two months after he had won his 200th victory of his career, he complained of a sore arm after being beaten by the Brooklyn Dodgers.

A short time later he was operated on and returned to his home in Meeker, Okla., to rest. Lately he has been pessimistic over the success of the operation.

The left-hander came to the Giants in 1928 from Beaumont in the Texas League. Noted for a fairly good fast one and a deceptive curve, he soon developed his screwball, a pitch which helped him win 18 games for John McGraw in 1929. In time the delivery became as famous as Christy Mathewson's fadeaway, but it and the years took a terrific toll of Hubbell's arm.

In 1933, after hurling the Giants to 23 victories in the regular season and leading the league with an earned-run average of 1.66, Hubbell was voted the most valuable player in the National League. That year he pitched the Giants to two triumphs over the Washington Senators in the World Series.

He won 21 or more games for the next four years, leading the league in games won with 26 in 1936—his high-water mark—and setting the pace in wan and lost percentage, earned runs and strikeouts on numerous occasions.

Griffith Re-elected President of Nats; Dividend Is Voted

In a routine action, stockholders of the Washington Baseball Club yesterday re-elected Clark Griffith as president, approved the policies of the club's officials and quickly adjourned.

Re-elected to office with Griffith, who was returned to the presidency of the club for the twenty-seventh consecutive year, were Vice President William Richardson, and Secretary-Business Manager Edward B. Eynon, jr.

Griffith, who with Richardson, is the controlling stockholder, announced that a 20 per cent dividend of $40,000 had been declared on the 1938 season by the Washington Club.

The Nats' president revealed also that the club will spend $35,000 on improvements to the park this season, which include a brick addition to house retiring rooms for both men nad women, and a new press box to be erected at the rear of the upper deck.

Refusing to divulge the amount of the team's profits on the 1938 season, Griffith declared: "Much of our income was expended in the development of our farm system which now embraces seven teams. Our Charlotte team in the Piedmont League was the only farm club which was self-supporting last year."

Baltimore Boy Halted By Right

Left Hook Softens Marylander After He Surprises With Flurry of Punches

By Lewis F. Atchison.

Heralded as the outstanding contender for the featherweight crown, Petey Scalzo lived up to all advance notices last night at Turner's Arena where he knocked out Lew Transparenti in the seventh of a scheduled 10-round bout.

A prohibitive favorite in wagering, Scalzo made his youthful Baltimore opponent appear downright amateurish as he prodded him with a unerring left throughout six rounds, then turned on the heat and knocked him senseless with a furious two-fisted attack in the seventh.

Transparenti survived one knockdown before stumbling into the finishing punches. A murderous right hook dropped him the first time, leaving him stretched on his face in his own corner. He wearily shook off the blow's effect, staggered to his feet at the count of nine, and tried to get beyond range of Scalzo's punches on rubbery legs.

Scalzo Follows Him

But Scalzo was upon him like a hawk. He measured him carefully but quickly, then entombed a straight left in his chin that carried enough dynamite to end the one-sided bout. But the punch was only the first part of a one-two maneuver, and before Scalzo could halt himself he had ripped over a right to the jaw. Transparenti fell helplessly into him, and as Scalzo stepped back, toppled to the floor. Referee Charley Reynolds didn't bother to count, but raised Scalzo's hand aloft in token of victory.

The end came 2 minutes and 5 seconds after the start of the round—and about six rounds later than the fans thought the knockout would come.

Transparenti was woefully overmatched. He was timid, too slow, and helpless against Scalzo's perfect boxing. Not until the third round did Transparenti land a blow—a left hook to the body that did no visible damage. Until then it was a contest between Scalzo's jabbing and Lew's footwork, with the latter running a poor second.

Transparenti Gets Busy

Bell Saves Willis

Wilson (147¼) floored his opponent twice in the fifth, both times for nine-counts, and only the bell saved Willis (142½) from a knockout. Wilson himself was on the floor in the second, after colliding with a looping right, but came up without a count. The veteran's punishing left-hooks were the deciding factor. They hurt Willis, and, with the exception of a brief flurry in the final round, he finished spent and exhausted.

Sammy Laporte (123½) scored a unanimous decision over Petey Powell (119¾), Richmond, in a 6-round semifinal. Powell gave a great boxing exhibition, which the fans heartily applauded, but Laporte landed all the punches.

Trio to Work Charity Game

O'Meara Flynn and Joe Meglen Volunteer Services for Grid Tilt

Four of the District's most popular football officials yesterday volunteered their services for Saturday afternoon's charity football game in which Charley Malone's Warwick A. C. faces John Jankowski's District All-Stars in Catholic University Stadium at 8:15 o'clock.

Harry D. (Hobey) O'Meara (Gonzaga;) Tommy Whelan (Catholic University;) Hugh (Bingo) Flynn (Catholic University), and Joe Meglen (Georgetown) are the officials who have donated their services to the fund sponsored by the Washington Society for The Blind for the rehabilitation, of the District's blind people.

The co-operation of these officials as well as other civic minded individuals and organizations will make possible a 100 per cent turnover of all receipts realized for the purchase of equipment for stands operated by Washington's blind in the lobbies of Federal buildings.

Important practices involving both the Warwick A. C. and District All-Stars squads are scheduled for the next two nights.

Tonight, all Warwick players are asked to gather in front of the Home Theater, Thirteenth and C streets northeast, at 8 o'clock. They then will proceed to Duffy Stadium, Seat Pleasant, Md., for an 8:30 o'clock workout.

Jankowski's 29-man All-Stars squad has scheduled a secret workout behind closed gates at Duffy Stadium tomorrow night at 8 o'clock. New plays will be introduced and all players are asked to be present.

Indications yesterday were that one of the largest sandlot crowds since the days of Northeast Washington's celebrated Apaches will be in attendance, the promise of a fine game and a good cause combining to arouse unusual interest.

Sad Duke Squad Heads East As Trojans Wildly Celebrate

Coach Wade Bitter Over Unfortunate Loss; Trojans Hero Substitute to Get Letter; Jones Praises Blue Devils

By the Associated Press.

Pasadena, Calif., Jan. 3.—The shrill screech of the train whistle echoing dismally down the Arroyo Seco signaled the departure of the Duke gridiron forces for North Carolina today, leaving the Trojans of Southern California to continue their celebration of victory in the Rose Bowl.

It was a somber band of Duke players which climbed aboard the Blue Devil Special, and the quietest man with the group was Wallace Wade, the coach.

His undefeated team had been beaten and his own near perfect Rose Bowl record shattered by a fourth-string quarterback and a substitute sophomore end in the fading seconds of yesterday's game.

No wonder Wallace Wade felt the defeat keenly; small wonder that he declined to join in praise of the Southern California team, express a wish to come back to the Rose Bowl or even shake the hand that beat him.

That 7-3 score was a bitter one for Mr. Wade, and he made no effort to conceal his feelings.

The other side of the picture—the Trojan side—was one of unrestrained joy. It centered around the broad shoulders of Doyle Nave, the fourth-string pass artist who threw the aerial that beat the Blue Devils, and "Antelope Al" Krueger, the sophomore end who caught Nave's throw which did something mighty Pitt, Colgate and seven other teams had been unable to do—score upon or beat the Iron Dukes.

Nave, who has warmed the Trojan bench for two years, wasn't sure he would earn a varsity letter this year.

Today he was advised he not only would get a letter "but the whole alphabet."

Howard Jones, the Trojan coach who saw his fourth team emerge victorious from the Rose Bowl yesterday, and the entire squad gave unstinted praise to the Duke eleven. To Eric (the Red) Tipton, Bolo Perdue, Dan Hill, Tom Maloney, Bill Bailey, "Sweet Pea" Johnson, Fred Yorke and the rest of the Blue Devil outfit came Troy's compliment as "the toughest, hard-socking team" met this season.

Figures on the game will not be available for several days, but it was estimated the 91,000 or so paid admissions would amount to approximately $325,000, which is more than the record figure of $306,421 taken in for the U. S. C.-Pitt game in 1930.

$25,000 Offered For Farr Services

New York, Jan. 3 (AP).—Joe Gould, manager of Tommy Farr, former British Empire heavyweight champion, today received a cable from Promoter Armand Vincent offering Farr a guarantee of £5,000 (about $25,0000) for a bout in London with Len Harvey, English heavyweight champion, on May 12. Vincent also offered to pay the £750 fine which the British Board of Boxing Control slapped on Farr when the latter refused to defend his empire title.

Johnny Allen's Arm Is Okay After Operation

Cleveland, Jan. 3 (AP).—Surgeons stretched Pitcher Johnny Allen's salary arm on an operating table for 15 minutes today and removed a small piece of bone below the elbow.

ALLEN

Alva Bradley, president of the Cleveland Baseball Club, said the doctors assured him that everything was all right after the operation, performed in an attempt to cure an ailment that robbed Allen of his effectiveness last summer.

"The doctors told me that the bone was loose," Bradley said "and that they just spread the muscles and removed it. They didn't cut anything loose.

"They also said the arm never would have healed if they had not operated, and that it was the right thing."

Allen will receive $20,000 next season under his two-year contract. He is due to stay several days at Cleveland Clinic and then leave for his St. Petersburg, Fla., home where he can start conditioning the arm in about six weeks.

'Duke Vigilantes' Request Jailing Of Trojan Heroes

Pasadena, Calif., Jan. 3 (AP).—Chief of Police Charles H. Kelley received a telegraphic warrant today from Durham, N. C., home of Duke University, signed the "Duke Vigilantes," for the arrest and incarceration of Doyle Nave and Al Krueger, Southern California passing combination that won yesterday's Rose Bowl football game.

"Hold Nave and Krueger, of Southern California football team, both charged with grand larceny, viz.: Stealing game from Duke University. Truly, two great opportunists. (Signed) Duke Vigilantes."

"Your order has been duly obeyed. Krueger and Nave in dungeon guarded by squad with machine guns. New year's greetings to supporters of most gentlemanly and scientific football team ever to appear in Rose Bowl."

East-West Classic Complete Sell-Out

San Francisco, Jan. 3 (AP).—Gross receipts of the East-West charity football game will run somewhat over $100,000, William Coffman, director of the event, announced today.

The fourth annual contest, played yesterday, was the first complete sell-out since the game was originated. The capacity crowd numbered 60,000.

Anacostia Links To Be Altered

C. Marshall Finnan, superintendent of National Capital Parks, announced yesterday that Anacostia Golf Course will close today for two months to make necessary changes and improvements.

Because of the construction of the new Pennsylvania Avenue Bridge, one tee and two greens, downstream of the bridge, must be eliminated. They will be replaced later. During the shut-down it is planned to make extensive improvements in the golfers' lobby and in the locker rooms. Swimmers' and golfers' quarters will be segregated.

Down In Front

By Richards Vidmer

Story Book Stuff

New York, Jan. 3.—A couple of the bowl games couldn't have been better if they had been staged.

VIDMER.

The Orange Bowl at Miami apparently was the setting for something closer to a free-for-all fist fight than a football game as Tennessee beat Oklahoma. The Cotton Bowl at Dallas must have been rather dull with St. Mary's rolling up a three touchdown lead over Texas Tech before the Texans could even start to roll. And the Sun Bowl at El Paso turned out a track meet as Utah ran wild against New Mexico. But the other two must have been lulus.

Way down yonder in New Orleans where Carnegie Tech and Texas Christian met in the Sugar Bowl, 50,000 spectators must have been filled with emotional excitement and hysterical uncertainity most of the afternoon. And when the final whistle sounded a lot of experts sitting in on the exhibition must have nodded their heads with satisfaction.

Most of them selected Davey O'Brien, the Texas Christian quarterback and Ki Aldrich, the Texas Christian center, on their All-American teams, and judging by the accounts of the action as relayed over the radio, no two young men ever were more deserving of the honor.

When the first half was nearly over, with only 50 seconds remaining and T. C. U. leading by a touchdown, Pete Moroz, Carnegie back, hurled a 50-yard pass in desperation across the Texas goal line, and there it was caught by George Muha, who added the extra point. During the intermission it seemed as though little Davey O'Brien, instead of being a hero, might be the goat, for little Davey had failed to convert after T. C. U.'s touchdown and the score was 7 to 6 in favor of Carnegie Tech.

A Warrior Returns

But Slingshot Davey came back slinging in the second half and proved his feet were not of clay. Bang, bang, bang the passes came rifling off little Davey's right hand, hitting his receivers in the arms. And five minutes after the second half began, T. C. U. had scored again.

But again O'Brien missed his attempt to kick the extra point, and with the score 12 to 7 it still was anybody's ball game. A touchdown would win for Carnegie Tech, and the powerhouse from Pittsburgh was rolling. Four, 5 and 6 yards were picked up at a time on the overland march. First downs were added one to another. Generally Carnegie Tech was a constant threat as the minutes ticked away. But always something happened to stem their stampede short of the T. C. U. goal line. It was a roving Texas ranger named Ki Aldrich.

And then in the fourth quarter the same Davey O'Brien wiped away all doubt. Still rifling his passes, ignoring the danger of interceptions, unwilling to play safe and conservatively on the 5-point lead the Texans held, O'Brien hurled his team down deep into Carnegie territory. And when the Carnegie line stood firm, with heels hard pressed in the shadows, when the Carnegie backs batted down the final attempts to pass, Slighot Davey of the accurate aim, took to his toes and kicked a field goal that put the game out of reach.

In Defense of a Record

And out on the wave-washed Western Coast, only an hour after the battle of New Orleans had finished, another drama was being broadcast across the country, if anything, more thrilling with greater heart throbs than the first.

Out there Duke was playing Southern California in the Rose Bowl, not 50,000, but 91,000, spectators were wrestling with ragged nerves, pounding pulses and half-hysterics.

Yet for three quarters Duke not only stopped the Trojan attack in its tracks, but played the pride of the Pacific on even terms. With only one more quarter to play, Duke still had not been scored on, and even if Duke had failed to score itself, it still was an achievement of honor.

And then in the fourth quarter, Duke pass put the invaders on U. S. C.'s 25-yard line. Thus this was the first scoring chance either team had been able to develop. Three times the Blue Devils crashed at the Trojan line, but on fourth down there still was a yard to go, and then Tony Ruffa entered the game.

"I don't know much about Tony Ruffa, but I can imagine his feelings as he stood there on the 23-yard line, preparing to attempt a field goal. I can imagine the pounding of his heart as he lifted his glance and saw victory and the goal posts beckoning. 33 yards away, and I could sense the silence of the crowd behind the broadcaster's stuttered descriptions.

And then came a roar through the loudspeaker. The kick had been good. Duke was ahead, 3 to 0; and there were only minutes to play.

Then a back named Nave took the ball, faded back as the Duke forwards swarmed toward him, drew back his arm and let go. Once more it settled into the outstretched hands of an end named Kreuger, and Kreuger was in the end zone.

Through a whole season Duke had maintained a perfect defense; through a whole season except the last 40 seconds.

Onrush, Manly in Thrilling Dead Heat at Tropical Park

Two Platers Close as One In 8th Race

Pit Terrier Victor In Carded Feature; Col. Scott Second And Repeller Third

By the Associated Press.

Tropical Park, Fla., Jan. 3.—Two veteran platers provided the biggest thrill of today's racing when they finished in a dead heat in the eighth race. P. B. Codd's Onrush and Mrs. J. R. Priest's Manly came from behind and the judges were unable to separate them even with the aid of the photograph. The result forced a double win pay-off with backers of Onrush getting $6 and those who bet Manly $10.10. A pair of Latin-American jockeys fought it out with R. Donoso on Onrush and J. Jaurez aboard Manly.

Never Cease, the favorite, was third after being hard used running Tzigane into the ground in the first three-quarters of the mile and 60 yards test. The choice quit in the straighaway and Onrush took command only to be unable to resist the closing dash of Manly.

Pit Terrier, which recently made his Florida debut and finished fourth to his stablemate, Sir Asia, flashed an improved brand of speed and breezed off with the featured Pahokee Purse, a six furlong dash that attracted eight 3-year-olds to the post. Breaking on his toes, the brown son of Bull Dog, representing Stroube & Collins, had no trouble remaining in front and registered by three lengths under Joe Rosen.

W. F. Scott's Col. Scott, an outsider, was second all the way. He beat Mrs. J. N. Kelly's Repeller by two lengths. Pit Terrier skipped home in 1:12 3-5, and returned $6.60 for $2.

J. W. Parrish's Stockboard, a gelding that finished fourth in the Kentucky Jockey Club Stakes last November, made his local debut and burned up considerable money. The Western invader was installed the favorite, but just past the half-mile pole, he was almost knocked down and dropped completely out of contention.

Pit Terrier, once in front, continued smoothly under nice handling. He widened his margin over the surprising Col. Scott in the last quarter mile. Repeller, a slow beginner, had weak contention for the show end of the purse.

CANDAR followed the leaders closely under light restraint to the stretch turn, came to the inside of the leaders, and took command with a rush to win in hand. FAIR, a forward contender all the way, finished ground turning into the stretch and outlasted HAPPILY in the final drive. HAPPILY, in the thick of contention all the way, bore out in the final quarter mile, but closed gamely through the stretch when straightened out. IZAAK WALTON moved up swiftly on the extreme outside after leaving the backstretch and lost much ground. LITTLE TARZAN closed a big gap from a slow beginning.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—MANEUVER, $6.90, $3.50, $2.50; GREEN MELON, $3.40, $2.70; SURE CLOUD, $4.70.

MANEUVER, on the outside and in close attendance of the leaders all the way, assumed command entering the stretch and crossed before the field while going clear, but was ridden out energetically to the finish. GREEN MELON forced a steady pace from the start, made a game effort, but was not equal to the winner. SURE CLOUD, prominent in the scrimmage between the leaders in the early stages, faltered slightly in the final drive. ASSIST, forced wide on the stretch turn, closed stoutly in the last furlong. MR. BUDDY hung. EBLIS quit as if short through the stretch.

Daily Double, Candar and Maneuver, Paid $51.00.

THIRD RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $700; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post 3:39. Off 3:01½. Winner, Mrs. C. Spaith's b. s. Two-dollar mutuels paid—MARFEU, $36.20, $12.90, $6.40; FREE CHILD, $8.20, $5.10; BRAIN TRUST, $3.60.

MARFEU, rated back of the leader under light restraint in the opening half mile and closed with determination on the outside when placed to pressure to outlast FREE CHILD when the real issue came. FREE CHILD gradually improved his position on the extreme outside in the last quarter mile and would have won in a few more strides. BRAIN TRUST began fast, showed the most early foot while saving ground, but then faltered in the stretch drive. LADFIELD, intermittently punished and hard ridden in the final three furlongs, was unable to reach the leaders.

FOURTH RACE—One mile and 60 yards. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good. Won ridden out; place driving. Went to post 3:27. Off 3:28½. Winner, C. E. Hudson's ch. c. Two-dollar mutuels paid—RUGGED RED, $18.20, $6.00, $3.40; BILLABONG, $4.00, $3.00; TRANSDAY, $4.10.

RUGGED RED, on the outside and under steadying restraint in the first half mile, gradually bettered his position thereafter under urging and, disposing of BILLABONG entering the stretch, won going away. BILLABONG, hustled to the front going to the first turn, showed the most speed, continued gamely when challenged, but could not keep stride with the winner. TRANSDAY went forwardly and saved ground the entire trip and was easily beat of the balance. SHORT RATIONS, prominent early, weakened after going 6 furlongs. QUICK CHANGE was crowded back at the half-mile pole.

FIFTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $800; allowances. For 3-year-olds. Start good. Won handily; place driving. Went to post 3:54. Off 3:56. Winner, Stroube and Collins' br. c. Two-dollar mutuels paid—PIT TERRIER, $6.60, $4.30, $3.20; COL. SCOTT, $20.40, $6.60; REPELLER, $3.40.

PIT TERRIER began fast, was hustled clear of his opposition in the opening furlong, then was rated in front until straightened out into the stretch and drew out in the final furlong. COL. SCOTT, a forward contender the entire trip, saved ground into the stretch, but never threatened the winner. REPELLER, away tardily, bettered his position gradually on the outside and easily shook off the remainder. DONA MONTEZ showed a flash of speed. STOCKBOARD, well up on the inside, was moving to the leaders when he was crowded into the fence and compelled to pull up suddenly.

SIXTH RACE—One mile and 60 yards. Purse, $700; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:21. Off 4:23½. Winner, A. W. Charboneau's ch. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—COURTNEY'S PET, $11.10, $6.20, $5.40; QUICKER, $8.10, $6.70; AMERICA FIRST, $14.00.

COURTNEY'S PET, quickest to begin, drew clear going to the first turn, then steadied in front; had something in reserve when it came to a drive and just lasted long enough to withstand QUICKER'S bid. The latter, going in his best form, improved his position gradually on the outside and would have won in a few more strides. AMERICA FIRST, forced wide around the first turn, gained steadily on the outside after leaving the backstretch and held HARRY'S DREAM safe in the final drive. The latter saved much ground into the stretch, but could not get up.

SEVENTH RACE—One mile and 60 yards. Purse, $700; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:49. Off 4:51. Winner, A. E. Webber's b. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—FINDON, $17.70, $7.40, $4.30; CONTINUITY, $6.00, $4.10; EARL PORTER, $4.60.

FINDON, under stout restraint in the early running, gained steadily when placed to pressure and outlasted CONTINUITY when the final issue came. CONTINUITY, prominent all the way, assumed a short lead rounding the lower turn and saved ground into the stretch, but could not stave off the winner's bid. EARL PORTER began fast, but was eased off the pace in the six furlongs, made a game effort when put to a drive and finished going strong. WILD COUNT, slow to find his stride, closed a big gap in the last three furlongs while racing wide. GALLOPING retired after six furlongs. She galloped off six furlongs after the finish.

EIGHTH RACE—One mile and 60 yards. Purse, $700; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post 5:19. Off 5:20½. Winners, P. B. Codd's b. g. (9), by Sweep On—My Lady. Trained by owner, and Mrs. J. R. Priest's ch. g. (6), by Fine Manners—Corn Bread. Trained by R. J. Priest. Value to winners, $313.50 each; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 0:23 3-5, 0:47 3-5, 1:12 3-5, 1:40, 1:44.

ONRUSH and MANLY, covered by a fast early pace, gradually improved their respective position on the outside after going five furlongs. ONRUSH moved to the front when straightened into the stretch, but faltered and could not withstand MANLY'S challenge. The latter, rated behind the leaders, bettered his position gradually while circling the field and would have won clearly in another stride. NEVER CEASE, used up racing TZIGANE into defeat in the early running, faltered when the final test came.

Hoyas Meet N. Y. U., Maryland Plays Penn Tonight

G.W. and C.U. Also to Play This Week

Cards, St. Francis Meet Here Saturday; Colonials Travel to Tackle Roanoke

By Jack Munhall.

College basketball, temporarily forgotten in the midst of Christmas vacation and the accompanying "bowl" hysteria, returns to the local spotlight this week as four of the five major District teams prepare for the more crucial games on their schedules.

Undefeated Georgetown, and once-beaten George Washington and Maryland, have tough engagements which should conclusively establish their true strength. Catholic University, off to a miserable start, will attempt to begin the New Year with a victory over St. Francis Saturday night in the only game listed here.

Meantime Georgetown, George Washington and Maryland take to the road for single games. The Hoyas, back under the tutelage of Elmer Ripley, one of the country's smarter basketball coaches, have, perhaps, the most exacting task, meeting ever-formidable N. Y. U. in the Garden tonight.

G. W. Plays Saturday

At approximately the same hour in neighboring Philadelphia Burt Shipley's Maryland five tackles Pennsylvania, an Eastern League power. Saturday George Washington journeys to Salem, Va., for a meeting with strong little Roanoke.

The Violets game is very important for Georgetown in more ways than one. Beaten by the Gotham five and also by Fordham in games last season, Georgetown's prestige in New York is at the wavering point and can only be revived with an impressive triumph.

N. Y. U. probably will be favored over Georgetown, despite the records which show two victories and as many defeats for the Violets, and three straight victories for the Hoyas. The Violets were caught off stride by little Panzer, and then dropped a decision to Minnesota. Georgetown's victories were registered over Western Maryland, Loyola and American.

Seeks Fourth Victory

Maryland, coming along fast after an unofficial loss to Penn State in a clinic exhibition game, meets an unknown quantity in the Quakers, who are making their season's debut. The Terps will be seeking their fourth victory against a loss to Richmond. Since bowing to the Spiders the Terps bowled over Clemson, The Citadel and Davidson in a trio of Southern Conference contests.

George Washington, which rebounded from a defeat by Ohio State in its opening game to register consecutive victories over Clemson, The Citadel and Ohio University, may strike a tartar in Roanoke, perennialy the producer of fine basketball squads.

Navy Lists Varsity, Plebe Rifle Meets; Mat Date Canceled

The athletic association also announced that the Navy plebe wrestling team meet with Augusta Military Academy, set for February 18, had been canceled. The academy is not planning a team this year. The plebes will meet V. M. I. frosh grapplers February 11, and the Mercersburg Academy wrestlers February 25.

Joanny Winner At New Orleans

New Orleans, Jan. 3 (AP).—J. Shouse's Joanny won her initial start of the 1939 campaign today when she defeated six other claimers in the feature race for 4-year-olds and upward over a fast 6-furlong strip at the Fair Grounds.

Joanny, 4-year-old chestnut filly, by Questionnaire—Grace R., carrying light weight of 98 pounds, was off slowly, but steadily came from behind, and under the steady handling of Jockey Dupuy, caught the leaders in the middle of the stretch and then went on to win easily. Tunbridge, owned by J. J. Miller, second choice in the betting, closed well and took the place from Mrs. A. M. Creech's Grey Streak, the outstanding favorite.

The winner paid her followers the sum of $10.40 for each $2 and ran the distance in the fast time of 1:12 1-5.

Soldiers, Crooners, Jitterbugs Don Gloves As Maryland Hopes for Conference Title

'Team Good on Paper,' Says Heine Miller, Veteran Official

By Lewis F. Atchison.

A jitterbug piano player, a quarter-miler, a tennis player, a R. O. T. C. officer, a Cuban crooner, and a lot of lefthanded lads comprise the University of Maryland's 1939 boxing squad, but they have a flair for slinging fists that leads Coach Heine Miller to believe the Terps will enjoy a successful campaign.

Miller, as a matter of record, wouldn't be surprised if the Terrapins won the Southern Conference championship, duplicating a feat they achieved two years ago when he first took over the helm at College Park.

"This team looks good enough on paper to win the conference title," Herr Heinrich confides to your reporter, contentedly munching a cigar. "And every time I see the boys work my estimation of their ability increases. Maybe I'm laying myself open for a knockout punch, but I honestly think we're going places this year.

A veteran coach, official and former Navy champion, Miller's cold, blue eyes have carefully appraised the value of hundreds of collegiate fighters. He's refereed an untold number of matches, and witnessed as many more from the seat of a coach and spectator, and on the strength of that experience certainly should know whereof he speaks.

The apple of Heine's eye is Frank Cronin, a quiet, almost shy, youth, who holds both indoor and outdoor quarter-mile championships in the Southern Conference. Cronin is tabbed as one of the best-looking prospects that ever pulled on a glove, and has been sensational in the gym. He may, as Miller warns, not go as well in actual competition, but Heine will stake his reputation on the prediction that he'll be the star of the conference this season.

Benny Alperstein, who strolled into the training room with a long, shiny knife dangling from a Sam Brown belt, indicating his rank in the R. O. T. C., is, of course, the outstanding fisticuffer on the team. A two-time national champion and reigning conference featherweight titleholder, Alperstein appears to be a cinch to repeat this season and is counted on to lead the team in dual meets. Benny is not taking the game too lightly, and failed to train yesterday only because of late classes. He has his eye on a third national championship—a feat never before accomplished—and stands an excellent chance of achieving that distinction.

In the 127-pound class Miller has Bob Bradley, a happy-go-lucky lad who bangs the piano for the glee club, sports a 3.5 scholastic average, and waggles a mean right hook. Charley Dott, George's younger brother, is his lone opponent for the berth, and Bradley's experience should enable him to land it. Last year Bradley's training was sponsored by the Old Keg Brewing Co., but he is training seriously this year, and should win a lot of bouts.

Nate Askin, a reformed tennis star from Baltimore, who dropped that love net business for the unlovely art of banging an opponent's chin, appears to have improved over last year, when he had the makings of a good scrapper but lacked confidence in his ability.

Emery Sedlak, Morty Steinbach and Isreal Leites are bunched in a close race for the light-heavyweight division. They're so evenly matched it looks like a photo-finish, and it is not improbable that Miller will alternate them throughout the season.

Herman Raisin, a senior from Brooklyn, is the lone heavyweight on the roster this season. Abe Cohen, touted as a potential champion abandoned the sport, and Sam Jacques, an in-and-outer last season, hasn't measured up to par. Raisin has the field to himself.

Cronin Standout, Alperstein Ready For Season Opener

The boys yesterday were busy preparing for Friday's preview, an intra-squad match, which will be held for the purpose of determining who's gonna fight where this year.

The Terps open their seven-match schedule January 14 with Duke at Durham. Their first home match is January 28 with Catholic University at College Park. Other foes to be met are Virginia at Charlottesville, February 4; North Carolina at Chapel Hill, N. C., February 11; Rutgers at College Park, February 18; Southern Conference Tournament at Columbia, S. C., February 24-25, and U. S. Military Academy at College Park, March 4.

Semi-Pros List Changes

Baseball Group Aims To Increase Number of Clubs; Other Plans

New York, Jan. 3 (AP).—Important changes in the 1939 program of the National Semipro Baseball Congress were announced today. The Congress, organized three years ago and headed by Ray Dumont, of Wichita, Kans., already claims the largest membership of any body sponsoring a single sport in the United States. Among the latest moves, however, is to increase the number of semipro clubs in the District, State, regional and national tournaments.

Other changes are stricter revisions in the National Player Contract System, in which any club signing a player already under contract will be outlawed from semipro baseball, and any team playing an outlaw club will be disbarred indefinitely, and improvement of officiating on the sandlots through the organization of a National Umpires Association.

1. Establishment of an American semipro series at Mayaguez, Puerto Rico, September 6-12, in which the U. S. semipro champions will compete in a seven-game series with Puerto Rican champions.

2. Development of the Canadian program, in which the Dominion championship will be settled, at St. John, New Brunswick, starting August 15.

3. A change to a best-two-of-three games series when the finalists meet in district tourneys to decide which team will enter a State tournament.

The commissioners to supervise the 800-odd tournaments throughout the United States will be approved at the annual meeting of commissioners at Chicago January 30.

Steel Output For 1939 Put 40% Higher

40,000,000 Tons No Boom in Sight Politics a Factor

By the Associated Press.

New York, Jan. 3.—Current prospects for the steel industry point to a 1939 ingot production of at least 40,000,000 gross tons, which would mean a 40 per cent gain over 1938, said Iron Age today in an annual survey.

"While no boom is envisaged even by the most optimistic," the trade publication asserted, "it is regarded as fairly certain that 1939 will outdo 1938 by a very fair margin."

Steel ingot production for the year just ended was estimated at 28,500,000 gross tons, but Iron Age pointed out that actual consumption was larger, due to a considerable carryover of 1937 production.

"There is no way of estimating the amount of this inventory that was consumed in 1938," the review continued, "but it was sufficient to depress steel production to an exceptionally low level during the first several months of last year.

Inventories Normal

"At the beginning of 1939 inventories are of normal size and in many instances below normal. Production at the moment is very largely for immediate use.

"Expectations for 1939 steel business are that most steel consuming lines will do as well as in the fourth quarter of last year and that some of them will do much better."

Whether railroads undertake large buying programs during the year, the survey declared, will depend primarily on their earnings and "the kind of government aid, if any, that is provided by Congress." The survey added:

"The outstanding unfavorable factor in the situation today is that much of the present activity has been artificially stimulated. If developments, politically and otherwise, are such as to give further confidence to private enterprise, steel business could conceivably improve more than the 40 per cent visioned in our present calculations."

Rail Equipments Lead Railroads Are Next Food Shares Third

New York, Jan. 3.—Continuing the recovery movement which began April 1, 100 representative common stocks closed the year with a further gain of 3.8 per cent in December, according to the regular monthly compilation issued by Frazier, Jelke & Co., members of New York Stock Exchange. The list rose 26.6 per cent in 1938 as monthly advances outnumbered declines 2 to 1.

Outstanding common stocks of the 100 companies in the index had a market value at the 1938 year-end of $19,030,480,000, compared with $18,335,087,000 on November 30, and $15,026,288,000 at the end of 1937. In 1936 a gain of 32.9 per cent was registered, compared with an advance of 41.3 per cent in 1935. The list dropped only 6.8 per cent in 1934, and the 1932 decline was 14.6 per cent. In 1933 the 100 stocks appreciated 56.1 per cent.

The Market

By C. Norman Stabler, A Special Correspondent.

Aircraft Shares Yield to Profit-Taking Utilities Hold Firm Against Selling

New York, Jan. 3.—Moderate recessions marked the first day of trading in 1939. In the case of the aviation and other stocks which zoomed in the closing months of 1938 on the prospect of major armament operations, the day's declines were sharp. This helped unsettle the balance of the list but the average decline of 0.26 point was no more than might be expected considering the strong rally in the last two days of the old year.

At that time there was a certain amount of window dressing in order to make balance sheets for December 31 look as well as possible and it is conceivable that some of the stock bought in such a cause came back on the market without much delay. Trading volume was moderate, amounting to 1,152,880 shares.

Power Shares Firm

Utilities stood out against the downward trend and losses among the rails were minor. Investors in both groups are keeping their fingers crossed and hoping that the Congress which convened today will do well by these important industries. In the case of the utilities there is the hope that appropriations to help the Administration wage its war against private enterprise in the power and light field will be kept to a minimum and in the case of the railroads there is the prospect that Congress will soon tackle this industry's problems and will evolve a helpful plan.

The year opened with business expecting little from the Administration but much from the new Congress. The President's two appointments to the Cabinet are taken in Wall Street as a definite indication that the Chief Executive has no intention of changing his views with respect to business. The prospect is for continued opposition.

One appointee was repudiated by the electorate of his State in the last election and the other saw his policy of heavy spending—which was increased before the election and curtailed immediately thereafter—just as effectively repudiated. But now they are to be members of the Cabinet, which is a notification to business. But effective resistance to the wildest schemes of the New Deal is now a probability and there is little doubt that Congress has given up its previous rubber stamp acquiescence. This is probably the item of greatest importance on the list of favorable factors that present themselves at the beginning of the year.

Steel Operations Jump

Within industry itself there was a welcome jump in steel operations announced today. The rate was exceptionally low as a result of the two holidays. For this week it has been placed at 50.7 per cent of capacity, compared with 38.8 per cent last week, a gain of 11.9 points, or 30.7 per cent. Operations are still 9.2 points below a month ago, however.

The construction industry, which is expected to be one of the mainstays for the steel industry in the first quarter, starts the year with the trend still upward in public and private contracts.

The break in the aviation stocks was the feature of today's market. Selling was based on profit-taking and on the belief that Congress may not fall into line completely with the Administration's intention to rush armament construction. Shipbuilding stocks felt the same type of selling.

While increases in equipment for all branches of the service are virtually assured, the street is convinced Congress will go over the plans in a thorough manner without rushing through blanket appropriations.

Wheat featured the commodity markets, selling at the best levels in five months. The price crossed 70 cents a bushel for the first time since early August. Unfavorable crop prospects in the Southwest contributed to the support. The close was up 1⅝ to 2⅛ cents. Cotton was unchanged to 6 points higher.

Silver Buying Fails to Catch Up With Gold

Purchases Still Heavy Only a Quarter Bought From Domestic Mines

New York, Jan. 3.—"Notwithstanding a rise of $1,750,000,000 in United States' gold stocks during 1938 to $14,500,000,000, or far in excess of any conceivable need, it is of interest to observe that the Treasury continues to be a heavy buyer of silver," the National City Bank of New York says today in its January letter. "Thus, during the year the Treasury's aquisitions of silver amounted to approximately 400,000,000 ounces, the largest since 1935, the previous record year under the silver purchase program. The imports of foreign silver during the first 11½ months of 1938, valued at $220,000,000, and equivalent to over 500,000,000 ounces at 43 cents an ounce, were likewise the largest since 1935. The domestic output, purchased at about $40,000,000, or 64.64 cents an ounce, was approximately 64,000,000 ounces, or about 10 per cent smaller than last year.

"The Treasury, in accumulating silver, is acting under mandate of the silver purchase act of 1934, which declared it to be the policy of the United States to maintain a quarter, by value, of its combined gold and silver stocks in silver, counting silver at the coinage rate of $1.29 an ounce. However, despite persistent and heavy buying, the Treasury has been unable to bring its silver holdings in line with the objectives of the act, and in December, 1938, the silver shortage was still 1,167,000,000 ounces, compared with 1,118,000,000 ounces a year ago and 1,333,000,000 ounces in July, 1934, when the silver purchase act became operative.

The explanation, of course, lies in the continuous increase in the gold stock. As fast as silver was bought, the rising gold stock called for additional silver, with the result that for four and a half years the silver reserves have been 'pursuing' the gold reserves without making any appreciable gain upon them.

Billion for Silver

"Frequent references in public discussion to the cost of the purchase program to the taxpayers appear to indicate a rather widespread misunderstanding as to how these acquisitions were financed. The fact is that the silver was paid for by issuance of silver certificates, outstanding amounts of which (including holdings by Federal Reserve banks) rose from $495,000,000 on June 30, 1934, to $1,572,000,000 on November 30, 1938. To the extent that these certificates are issued they replace Federal Reserve notes in circulation; thus a currency supported by silver worth in the market less than a third of the face value of the currency in supplanting the Federal Reserve note with all its carefully devised security and elasticity."

Bar Silver Price Jumps in London

London, Jan. 3 (AP).—The price of bar silver jumped 1 1-16 pence an ounce today as short traders, surprised by the United States' retention of its price for domestic silver, rushed to cover previous future sales. The spurt pushed the price up to 21¼ pence (44.05 cents, United States) as compared with the New York price for foreign silver of 42.75 cents an ounce.

President Roosevelt issued a proclamation Saturday that the Treasury would continue to pay 64.64 cents an ounce for newly-mined domestic silver. London traders, apparently, were "caught short" in some cases by speculating on the belief the American price would be lowered as was done on December 30, 1937, when it was cut to 64.64 from 77.5 cents an ounce.

Cotton Futures Work Higher

New York, Jan. 3 (AP).—Cotton futures moved up a little in late trading today after early irregularity as demand increased from brokers who usually trade for domestic mills. March closed at 8.49@8.50, with final prices unchanged to 6 points net higher.

After a narrow and irregular opening, near months were sustained by persistent price fixing, mostly for domestic mill account. There was some foreign selling and Japanese liquidation in new crop positions. Later in the day a brisk pick-up in demand for March and May appeared, with spot houses principal sellers of these months.

Wheat Jump Lifts Prices To 5-Month Top

Average Rise 2 Cents Crosses 70 Cents Corn Prices Steady

Chicago, Jan. 3.—The price of wheat shot up 2 cents a bushel in a New Year buying rush today to the best level in five months. Wheat sold above 70 cents a bushel for the first time since early August and buying was more spirited than at any time since the September war scare.

The brisk trading which ushered in 1939 business apparently was based on a number of constructive influences, foremost among which was continued unfavorable crop situation in the Southwest. As buying gained momentum and prices rose steadily with only fractional setbacks traders realized that selling sentiment was small. Short covering developed before the close and the final quotations were the highest of the day.

Wheat closed 1⅝-2⅛ higher than Saturday, May, 70¾-70⅞; July, 70⅞-71; corn unchanged to ⅛ up; May, 53¼-53⅜; July,

The Federal Diary

By Scott Hart

THE JUDGES are considering the nominations made in the "Miss Civil Service" campaign and those interested in the outcome will be glad to know of the painstaking effort that is being made to choose a winner worthy of the title. They are sparing neither time, effort nor lamplight . . . 'Tis heard that many people are regarding the new Jefferson nickels as rarities; are holding on to them as to coins worth more than 5 cents—which, of course, they aren't.

PERSONABLE Stanley P. Young, who changes his berth from a chieftainship in Biological Survey to a period of study on the American wolf, will move to the National Museum so he can have peace and quiet. The prediction is that he will come up off the elbows later with something to enrich the subject he already knows so well . . . The Agriculture Department of Bureau of Public Roads—which dispenses more money annually than any branch of the big governmental unit—remains one of the least heard of. And people often think that such a rich bureau would contain a lot of fat and plentiful jobs. But they're Scotchmen when it comes to hiring; and the jobs aren't fat.

DIRECTOR Nellie Tayloe Ross, of the Mint, leaves soon for visits to Fort Knox, Ky., where the gold is buried, and New Orleans, where the Assay Office is situated. She returns to Washington before visiting the mints in the West . . . The most prominent outstretched palm, as Congress opens, is the fund-starved Wage-Hour Division. When the funds come around, the first thing they want to buy is a brace of competent inspectors. They must wear civil service labels.

MICROPHOTOGRAPHY is being used by the Civil Service Commission to preserve its valuable records, some of which date to 1883, the birth year of C. S. By the process, the records are photographed on 16 MM. film and from 175 to 200 individual applications are recorded on 100 feet of film. The paper records may ultimately be destroyed, but the record is preserved without expense of vast storage space. To date, over 7,500 complete sets of application papers and 600,000 record cards have been microfilmed. If in daily use, the film would last 100 years; if kept in vaults the life would probably be four or five centuries.

FORMS for paying Federal income tax will be ready Thursday. But no one is excited in the Internal Revenue Bureau. They yawn, in fact; and then go to talking about the last-minute rush (March 15), which is the real headache.

ON the basis of convictions, the worst offenders against the mails are people (outside the Government service) who rifle letters. Convictions totaled 1,175. Fraudelent use of the mails came second, with 597 convictions, and burglary of post offices, stations, etc., was third with 425 convictions. Extortion letters brought words from the judge to 44. In the wide field of offenses, a total of 3,713 convictions were obtained.

ONE word description of Gladys Torson, who had an idea, put it on paper and got an O. K. from the Saturday Evening Post: Unexcited. Her coworkers in the Bureau of Biological Survey were more excited than she.

M. E. MYERS, president, Federal Bridge League, says the next team session begins January 10. And a small cost is for 12 consecutive Tuesday nights, less than 28 cents per night, payable when convenient. The sessions are open to beginners, intermediate or "better Federal employes and their families who enjoy a friendly association around the bridge table once a week." The time is 8:15; place, Wardman Park Hotel. The membership in the last team session was 21 tables. Telephone Georgia 5017 for additional details. This non-profit welfare association of Federal employes was organized in 1932.

THE ratings of the open competitive examinations taken by persons who are not now Federal personnel directors will be completed shortly and oral examinations will be speedily given this group . . . The seven men who composed the United States Board of Tea Experts for 1938 have been reappointed by Secretary Wallace. None is from around these parts. If you like a cup of tea, you will approve this little-heard-of-board. They set the standard for all tea brought into this country, which may involve a lot of tasting, for all we know.

STAR-GAZER'S chance: They want a junior meteorologist at the Weather Bureau; will pay $2,000 a year. Competitors get a written test and education in related subjects is required. It's through the C. S. Commission.

Bob Burns Says—

Yes, sir—I see where a young lady is suein' a feller because she claims he ran off the road in his car, tryin' to kiss her. Instead of a smack on the lips, she got a smack on the head an' some broken ribs—not to mention what happened to the poor guy's car. She figgers her damages at $25,000 with $5,000 more that she's tryin' to get from the boy's parents. I s'pose she's tryin' to collect somethin' extra from them on the theory that if their son hadn't been born, he wouldn't have been there to try to kiss her and the accident wouldn't have happened. Anyhow, it's all plenty complicated an' it jes' goes to show, you can't be too careful where you kiss a girl. If you're in a car an' you feel the romantic urge comin' on, head for the nearest parkin' space before you try parkin' a kiss—or you're apt to find yourself kissin' a tree. An' take it from me, brother—there's a difference!

Contract Bridge

By Florence Osborn.

Were today's hand not so tragic it would be funny, for the North-South players picked the only declaration at which they could not make a grand slam. They bid seven diamonds and were set when they could have taken 13 tricks at clubs, spades or no trump.

G. E. F., the contributor, asks, not surprisingly, for the correct bidding. He writes:

"My partner and I reached a grand slam in diamonds and were set one, when clubs, spades, or no trump could be made.

"My contention is that my partner should have opened with one spade instead of one diamond and showed club support in response to my club bid. What do you say?"

We agree. North's bid of one diamond was incorrect. He should have started with a spade. When two suits of unequal length are held, the longer suit is bid first in most situations. There is no need to bid the lower ranking suit, exercising the principle of "preparedness" for North has a strong hand and has ample rebid strength. Nor is there any reason to distort the principle of "reverse;" that is, bidding first a lower ranking then a higher ranking suit which, because it increases the contract needs must show a strong hand.

While we have no quarrel with South's bid of two no trump we would have preferred two clubs, showing the five-card suit and reserving the no-trump bid until later.

North should not have allowed seven diamonds to stand. He should have gone to seven no trump. Having already received support from South in spades and having a good fit in clubs he should have chosen a no-trump declaration rather than relying upon his flimsy four-card diamond suit. It is particularly dangerous in that South raised spades before diamonds, indicating that he held fewer diamonds than spades.

Today's Hand

North's bidding seems a little erratic and the reason for his going back to five spades is obscure. South's bidding cannot be criticized. He might, however, have bid no trump somewhere along the line to show his control of the heart suit. Over five spades he should have six clubs. If his partner made some sort of a cue bid in the club suit, he will be prepared to play the hand at six spades.

The Gang Arrives

—Old Mother Nature.

News that is really news travels as fast among the people of the Green Meadows and the Green Forest as among us human beings. Trouble and disaster are always news. Mrs. Lightfoot the Deer was in trouble. She had met with an accident that was nothing short of disaster. In jumping a woven-wire fence she had been thrown heavily and had caught a hind leg in the fence and was held a helpless prisoner. Already she had been discovered by Hooty the Owl and by Reddy Fox and Mrs. Reddy, and daylight had hardly begun.

Blacky the Crow is an early riser. He believes in retiring early and in being out and about early. So he goes to sleep, or tries to, with the coming of the Black Shadows to the Green Forest and he is awake with their going in the early morning. Blacky has good eyes. I wish my eyes were as good as his. He has need of good eyes. Especially is this true in winter when food is scarce and hard to find. He cannot afford to overlook anything edible then. So constantly using those sharp eyes for food, there is little else that he misses.

One of the first things that Blacky does in the morning is to fly to a certain tall tree and from the top of this look all about that he may see what is to be seen before starting out to search for his breakfast. That is what he did this morning. Almost at once he discovered, far in the distance, where a young orchard lay close to the edge of the Green Forest, Lightfoot the Deer.

"Now, what is he doing out there at this time of day? He should be back in the Green Forest by this time. And what is he staying right there for, yet walking about so uneasily? And what is that dark mass down on the ground?" muttered Blacky.

He knew that he wouldn't find the answer to his questions by sitting there, so he spread his black wings and headed straight for where Lightfoot was. He had flown but a little way when he saw that Reddy Fox and Mrs. Reddy were over there near Lightfoot. Now and then he made a short dash at them. A moment later he saw that that dark mass on the ground was Mrs. Lightfoot. Something had happened over there. Blacky quickened his wing beats and at the same time he began to caw at the top of his voice.

"Caw, caw, caw, caw!" he screamed. It was his own special call for rallying the gang. Almost at once he was answered from various places in the Green Forest, and out from the treetops rose black forms to hurry in his direction.

Such a racket as the gang made! This was the most exciting event for a long time and they were making the most of it. Some sat on fence posts. Some walked about on the ground. Some flew as low as they dared over Mrs. Lightfoot.

For a time Hooty the Owl, sitting on one of the fence posts, was undiscovered. Then one of the gang started to alight on that post, saw his mistake and with a shriek hastily dodged aside. Now, there is nothing that Blacky and his gang delight in more than in pestering Hooty the Owl and making life miserable for him. For the time being they forgot Mrs. Lightfoot and gathered about Hooty, screaming, calling him names and doing everything they could to annoy him. They swooped at him, but only the most daring went near enough to tweak out a feather, and these appeared frightened at their own daring. Hooty turned his head from side to side as only he can, hissing and snapping his bill with an ugly sound. Finally he took to his wings and headed for the darkest part of the Green Forest, the Crows streaming after him.

For the Fifth Consecutive Year

1938 marks the fifth consecutive year in which school advertisers placed more of their display advertising in The Washington Post than in any other Washington newspaper. Because of this leadership, Washingtonians have learned to consult The Post's advertisements for their school information. If you have not already arranged to take advantage of this plus reader interest in 1939, call Mrs. Virginia A. Nelson, NAtional 4200,
